An Amish farmer gets a step on working the fields with a harrow while the weather turned better, as only slightly warmer temperatures settled into Lancaster County later in the week. This is a field in Elizabeth Township, near Clay and Hackman roads. Eight mules help turn up the soil, warming it up for perhaps better seed-germinating conditions later on.

Every year brings new challenges for crop growers. Two years ago the state experienced the worst drought in its history. Last year brought lots of rain and some good crops all around. Who knows what's in store this time?

According to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS) in Harrisburg, the 2000 crop year was characterized by above-normal rainfall. Corn for grain, yielding 127 bushels to the acre, set a record. In comparison, PASS noted that the crop weather survey results for the week ending July 11, 1999, showed the corn condition at 21 percent poor to very poor, 46 percent fair, and 33 percent good to excellent. But the week ending July 9, 2000, showed the corn crop 7 percent poor to very poor, 17 percent fair, and 76 percent good to excellent. What a difference a year makes!

Once again, PASS reminds farmers that it's time, along with the changing of the clock, to start the weekly Crop & Weather Roundup Inquiry for the 2001 crop season. The weekly crop weather survey is designed to track the week-to-week changes in crop conditions and stages of development, and the impact of weather events on those crop changes.

Each week, from April to November, farmers, extension agents, and agricultural specialists give their expert opinion about field conditions and crop progress in their county. Survey results are released on the Internet on the Weekly Weather and Crop Bulletin on the first business day of every week at www.nass.usda.gov/pa/. The first report will be released via Internet at 4 p.m. on Monday, April 2.

PASS is actively seeking news gatherers who are knowledgeable about growing conditions around their county. If interested, send an e-mail to nass-panass.usda.gov or call (800) 498-1518 and ask for Eric Stout, Stephanie Houston, or Marc Tosiano. Photo by Stan Hall

NCBA Award Recognizes Sayres For A Structure 'So Simple, It Works'

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff
CHURCHVILLE, Md. — "There's nothing really complicated about it," said Lawrason Sayre of the structure that won Waffle Hill Farm the national "Tips For Profit" award. "It's so simple, it works."

Lawrason and son Ned recently won the national "Tips for Profit" honor from the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA).

To help increase beef production efficiency, the $3,500 prize recognizes innovation and aids the flow of new ideas across the nation.

Efficiency Boosted Environment Protected
The Sayres, owners of a 140-head Angus cow-calf herd, developed an efficient method of feeding hay and managing manure. The invention not only enhances efficiency and reduces production costs but also protects the environment.

After the Sayres, who maintain a grass-based operation, phased out of corn silage, they tried feeding round bales in hay rings along the edge of the woods.

"We were hauling hay through the mud, the cows were knee-deep in mud, the calves were getting stuck in the mud, we were feeding every other day

It's Time To 'Spring (The Clocks) Forward'

With the arrival of spring comes Daylight Saving Time, providing more hours of daylight for farmers.

It's time to "spring" forward to Daylight Saving Time, which begins tomorrow. We "spring forward" one hour at 2 a.m. Sunday, April 1.

So turn your clocks ahead before going to bed tonight. Remember, animal feeding and milking schedules need to be adjusted accordingly.

Hayes Announces FMD Monitoring Measures

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On Tuesday, because of the recent outbreak of foot and mouth disease (FMD) in Europe, Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. and state Veterinarian Dr. John Enck urged Pennsylvania's agricultural producers and veterinarians to be alert for signs of the disease and report any suspicious cases to the department at (717) 783-6677.

Hayes and Enck also an-

Eastern Region Frozen Eggs

ATLANTA, GA.

March 23, 2001

Report Supplied By USDA

Prices were sharply higher on yolks and blends, unchanged to slightly higher on whole, and unchanged on whites were compared to a week earlier. Trading was irregular. Offerings were held with confidence on yolks, other items were usually sufficient for trade needs. The undertone was firm on yolks, and blends, steady on whole, and unsettled on whites. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the Eastern region for the week ending March 17, 2001 were unchanged from the previous week, but 4 % less than a year ago. Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.

Report Supplied By USDA

Prices were unchanged. Trucklot buying interest was slow, with offerings of boneless/skinless breast fully adequate to ample and often discounted to move. Other items were irregular, although select tenders and fronts were well cleared, leg quarters short into export channels. Party wings were reported as short but in a steady to fully steady position. Retail and distributive interest was mostly light to moderate with best movement noted where limited feature activity was a factor. Trade sentiment was irregular and a iffy steady on B/S breast, improved on select tenders, fronts, party wings and leg quarters. Balance of items were generally steady.

Delmarva Broiler/Fryer ATLANTA, GA.

Report Supplied By USDA

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds remained mostly light and unaggressive. Offerings ranged adequate to ample, with 3.5 and 4 pound sizes readily available and competitively priced to stimulate additional buyer interest. Live supplies were about moderate; weights were mixed, but mostly desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 52 to 66 cents. Trade sentiment was barely steady to weak. In the parts complex, wings continued to be well cleared. Boneless skinless breast were available. All other items were at least adequate.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO

March 28, 2001

Report Supplied By USDA
Daily National Grain Market Summary

Declines were seen in grain and soybean bids, today. Concerns about weather and its impact on crop development pressure bids. Bids was lower for all commodities, Wheat 3 to 5 cents lower, Corn bids 2 to 4 cents lower, Sorghum 4 cents lower, and Soybeans 3 to 6 cents lower.

Trade was slow as traders await USDA's Prospective Planting report. Wheat bids lower with wet weather in the U.S. Corn and Wheat belts, continue to keep plant development behind normal. Corn prices was lower as lack of export interest and pre-report positioning drove bids lower. Soybeans also lower due to poor overnight trade and favorable harvest weather in South America. Also, the U.S. dollar traded higher on the day, giving reason for a slightly lower market.

Selling Quality Equipment Through Authorized Serving Dealers

LITTER AMENDMENT

New Poultry Guard™ Litter Amendment is a unique activated clay that delivers consistent ammonia control without the handling inconvenience associated with other poultry litter treatments

Unlike these other treatments, Poultry Guard Litter Amendment is easy and convenient to apply and needs no incorporation or activation. Fewer application variables mean more consistent performance. In addition, Poultry Guard can be applied up to five days before bird set, whenever it's convenient for the grower.

Using Poultry Guard
Litter Amendment
Is As Simple As...*Apply

Simply spread over poultry litter.

- No incorporation
- No moisture activation
- No complicated instructions for heating and ventilation in conjunction with application

Bird Set

Poultry Guard can be applied when it's most convenient, up to five days before bird set.

- No application timing headaches between clean out and bird set
- No last minute application after equipment has been lowered

Control Ammonia

Poultry Guard will deliver immediate and long-term ammonia control and give birds a healthier growing environment

- No more dangerously high levels of ammonia to stunt growth

You be the judge! We are confident this litter amendment will improve your poultry and your profits.

PALM SUNDAY

Coinciding with the first day of Passover this year, Palm Sunday (April 8) marks the beginning of Holy Week in the Christian calendar. Palm branches were said to have been placed on the ground before Christ for his entry into Jerusalem, and even before then, palms carried ceremonial meaning. In medieval Europe, palm branches were ritually blessed and distributed among churchgoers. The British poet and classical scholar A. E. Housman (1859-1936) wrote of the English custom of substituting pussy willows: "Afield for palms the girls repair, / And sure enough the palms are there, / And each will find by hedge or pond / Her waving silver-tufted wand." The anemone, called the passe flower, has also been associated with Passover.

The wood anemone never opens its petals but when the wind blows, hence its name.

TIP OF THE WEEK

Apply kitty litter to an oil spill in the driveway or garage, then just sweep it up.

PROSCIUTTO-WRAPPED ASPARAGUS

3 dozen asparagus spears
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 cloves garlic, minced salt and pepper
9 thin slices prosciutto
12 wooden or metal skewers

Preheat oven to 450°F. Trim the asparagus, arrange in rows of 6 spears, and poke two skewers perpendicularly through the rows. (The result will look like a raft.) Mix olive oil, garlic, and salt and pepper. Place asparagus on a broiler pan and drizzle with olive oil mixture. Roast, turning two or three times, until tender. Remove from heat. Wrap 4 spears in a slice of prosciutto and serve. Makes 9 appetizers.

OPINION

Avoiding 'Agri-Heartburn'

Some time ago, we reported about a farmer on a panel who described his experience with "agricultural entertainment," or what he calls "agri-tainment."

This gentleman, who farms close to Bedford, N.J., could not express the message he has learned any clearer: farmers' market stand operators who want to expand into traditional pick-your-own operations, offer hayrides, build corn mazes, and sell baked items may soon come under intensified federal scrutiny.

The warning: invest in liability insurance and keep all lines of communication between you and customers open, or face potential legal consequences.

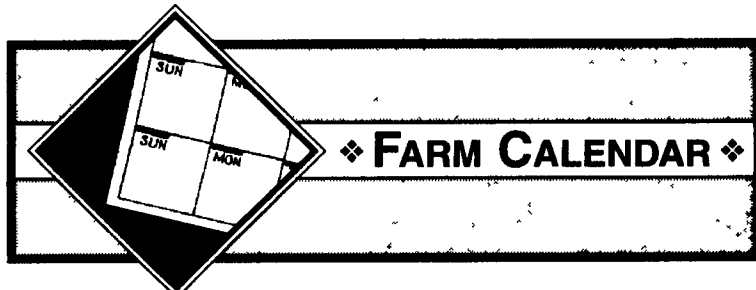

One farmer/panelist reminded the growers who attended the segment of the much-publicized Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention at Hershey in early February of the travails experienced by one southeast Pennsylvania farm market that had to deal with an alleged e.coli problem linked to a petting zoo at the market.

So, the message went, don't wait for federal prosecutors to come knocking. Be preemptive. At petting zoos, install wash stations. Follow all safety procedures.

One manager noted a problem with parking at his farm market. People — some with baby strollers and toddlers — were crossing on a busy highway. He saw an accident waiting to happen. So the market manager changed the entire parking area scheme, removed the potential hazards, posted the new routes, and clearly defined a parking "plan" that emphasized pedestrian safety.

Good call.

Have liability and customer safety plans installed on your farm market. Now that produce auction season is under way, also, have a great year!

Editor:

Did the dairy industry voluntarily yield to the soda industry in public schools? That's certainly the way it looked when I started going over USDA statistics showing the steady decline of milk and the rise of soft drink consumption these past 20 years.

Soft drink companies have been actively targeting teenagers, offering large sums of money in exchange for the placement of colorful vending machines throughout public schools. Contracts often include quotas and the ability to withhold funds should quotas not be met. In many schools, sales approach three cans a day per student.

The downside of high soda consumption is that it has recently been linked to rising obesity levels by Lancet, a medical journal. And, obesity is tied to an increase in diabetes, heart and kidney disease among the teen-age population. Plus, the consumption of sodas and its level of caffeine and phosphoric acid raises the issue of bone density problems among active teen-age girls and a possible flurry of early onset osteoporosis.

Now Is The Time

By Leon Ressler

Lancaster County
Extension Director

To Topdress Small Grain

Dr. Elwood Hatley in the agronomy department suggests the rate and timing of spring-applied nitrogen depends on several factors:

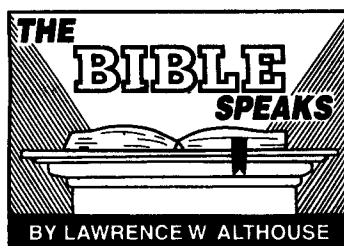

- The first factor is growth stage. If the plants are at growth stage 2 (main stem and one or two tillers) or less, apply the nitrogen as soon as plants start "greening-up." If the plants are past growth stage two, the nitrogen can be applied from "green-up" to growth stage 5 (early erect growth). Refer to the Penn State 1999-2000 Agronomy Guide, page 160, for a description of growth stages.

- The nitrogen rate will depend on anticipated yield, previous crop yield, previous fertilizer amounts, and frequency and amount of manure applied. Each bushel of wheat grain produced will require 1.3 to 1.5 pounds of nitrogen. Estimating the amount of nitrogen that will be supplied by the soil is important. Excessive nitrogen applications effect profitability, increase disease pressures, increase lodging potential, decrease yields, and increase the potential for nitrogen leaching.

- Inadequate nitrogen also affects profitability since it will result in reduced yield.

- One of the major factors affecting soil available nitrogen is frequency of manure applications. Research indicates that when fields are manured every one or two years, one should apply 0 to 30 pounds of nitrogen per acre. If applied every three to four years, one should apply 30 to 60 pounds of nitrogen per acre. When applied less frequently, one should apply 60 to 90 pounds of nitrogen per acre.

- Winter barley has less resistance to lodging than wheat; therefore, the nitrogen rates should be reduced accordingly. Keep the nitrogen rates between 45 and 60 pounds of nitrogen per acre when manure is not applied frequently to the field. When manure is frequently applied, use only 0 to 30 pounds of nitrogen per acre.

NO "MERE" ANYTHING

Background Scripture:

6:1 through 8:3.

Devotional Reading:

Micah 4:1-7.

It doesn't sound all that interesting or important, does it? Waiting on tables — a menial job, whether at home or in church. The twelve apostles in the post-resurrection church of Jerusalem made it sound that way: "It is not right that we should give up preaching the word of God to serve tables" (6:2). While we cannot know exactly what the twelve meant, it does sound as if they are denigrating the task of waiting on tables.

Because there were rising complaints within the church that the Hellenist (Greek-speaking) widows were not getting their share of the daily distribution of food, the apostles knew they had to do something to correct that condition. Their proposed solution was to appoint seven men to be responsible for this task, so that the apostles could devoted themselves to prayer, teaching, and preaching.

Some regard this passage as the first demarcation in the church between laity and clergy, what some would deem between a "lower" and "higher" calling.

Whether that is so or not, there does appear to be a qualitative difference between these two vocations: one group would be servants of the word; the other, servants of the serving tables.

Full Of The Spirit

I am not certain, however, that the difference isn't more apparent than real.

The contrast was not so much the spiritual quality of the two different groups, but of function. The qualifications laid down by the apostles is indicative: "...seven men of good repute, full of the Spirit and of wisdom" (6:3). Those sound like pretty heavy qualifications for people just waiting on tables. But then, where did we ever get the idea that preaching the word is qualitatively more advanced than serving the needs of fellow human beings? The calling of the clergy is not a higher calling, just a different one.

First selected was Stephen, described as "a man full of faith and of the Holy Spirit" (6:5). That hardly represents a step down in spiritual qualifications, does it? And then the apostles "prayed and laid hands upon them" — pretty impressive for men who were chosen "merely" to wait on tables and equitably provide food rations for the widows.

If this was the first experience of church organization, it seemed to have been successful: "And the word of God increased; and the number of disciples multiplied greatly in Jerusalem, and a great many of the priests were obedient to the faith" (6:7).

Stephen was not called to preach, but that did not keep him from witnessing for his Lord: "Stephen, full of grace and power, did great wonders and signs among the people" (6:8). When he disputed with the members of certain synagogues, we are told that "they could not withstand the wisdom and the Spirit with which he spoke" (6:10). There was a lot more to Stephen than waiting on tables. First of all, he was a witnessing disciple to Jesus Christ.

To Visit The Agricultural Analytical Services Laboratory Website

The Agricultural Analytical Services Laboratory (AASL) has recently upgraded its Website and moved it to the following location: <http://www.aasl.psu.edu/>.

This Website contains a description of the services offered by the laboratory. It also includes online access to the Soil Test Recommendations Handbook for Agronomic Crops. To view the handbook, click on the "programs" button on the left panel of the screen and select "Soil Test Recommendations Handbook for Agronomic Crops" on the next page. Here you can now view the recommendation tables for all agronomic crops online and print them as needed.

As any changes are made to the recommendations, the tables on this site will be updated. A sample soil test report as well as a multiple sample information form for agronomic crops are also available on this site for viewing or printing.

Quote of The Week

"Whoever is spared personal pain must feel himself called to help in diminishing the pain of others."

— Albert Schweitzer

Angel Face

Something else that we need to see is this man's great spirituality. The Council sat to examine this upstart and they were amazed at him: "And gazing at him, all who sat in the council saw that his face was like the face of an angel" (6:15). Of how many of the apostles was something like that said?

Stephen went on to preach a sermon to his antagonists, but it was not the sermon, but what happened when it was over that settled once and for all that Stephen was no "mere" anything. When his listeners evidence their rage and "ground their teeth against him," Stephen responded with an act of discipleship that was neither clergy nor lay, apostle nor deacon — it was the act of a true follower of Jesus Christ: "But he, full of the Spirit, gazed into heaven and saw the glory of God and Jesus standing at the right hand of God... And as they were stoning him, he prayed, 'Lord Jesus, receive my spirit.' And he knelt down and cried with a loud voice, 'Lord, do not hold this sin against them'" (7:55,59,60).

We do not know how the other disciples died or what they said in their last moments, but we may be assured that none of them rose above Stephen's example, for it was the example of our Lord Jesus Christ. When we live and die as he did, there is nothing "mere" about our lives.

Report Supplied By USDA

Compared to last week: Feeder and stocker cattle steady. Demand good for feeder cattle; very good for stockers. This poor wheat grazing season continues to limit the number of feeder cattle. Stockers under 700 lbs still make up an abnormally large part of the supply for March.

Quality of supply plain to average, end attractive. Feeder cattle in slightly thin to moderate flesh, few fleshy. Stockers in medium to thin condition with few fleshy new crop calves in supply. Weigh-ups highly varied from gaunt to full with bulk in average condition. Slaughter cows 2.50 lower. Slaughter bulls 1.00 lower. Packer demand moderate at lower levels. Demand good for thin cows returning to the country and replacement cows and pairs. Bulk of supply replacement cows and pairs from couple of dispersals. Many of these average to good quality black cows in emaciated condition. Cows and bulls totaled 650 head with only 22 percent to packers. Receipts this week 8368; last week 9126; last year 9569.

Supply consisted of 61 percent yearlings over 600 lbs; 31 percent calves and light yearlings under 600 lbs. 8 percent cows and bulls.

Heifers comprised 38 percent of feeder and calf supply.

Prices follow with weighted average weight and price in parenthesis.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State
March 23, 2001

Butter Markets Sense Scarcity

- Grade AA butter hits $1.6450 at CME.
- Cheese remains stable.
- Futures markets strengthen.

It's official! I've taped today's futures market settlement prices for March through December 2001 on the wall in my office. I'm calling the top of the market and believe prices will not get much higher (no, this bit of news won't depress futures market prices). I could be wrong about this, but we'll just have to wait and see. Any way you look at it, some enterprising individual could lock in a portion of their 2001 milk supply at some very favorable prices.

The futures market settlement prices for today at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange shows the Class III price to peak at $13.25 per cwt in September of 2001. Recall the September Class III price last year was $10.76 per cwt. The Class IV futures price peaks at $14.53 by April 2001 and remains close to that level through November 2001.

These are very strong prices! The question then is whether the actual Class III and IV prices will be this strong when we roll into the spring and fall months. In reality they will be either higher or lower. What we do know is that producers can use the futures markets today to "lock in" substantially higher milk prices when compared to last year.

The new information that has likely affected the butter market is USDA's Cold Storage report that was released March 20. It shows butter stocks on February 28, 2001 at 83.6 million pounds, down 22.5 percent from a year ago. Grade AA butter prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange this week rose from $1.5650 per pound on Monday, March 19 to $1.6450 by Friday, March 23. USDA reported this week that cream supplies are reported as "tight." If adequate butter is not made by June of this year, butter will be tight the rest of the year.

The cheese market remained steady this week at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Blocks rose slightly from $1.32 per pound on Monday, March 19 to $1.34 by Friday, March 23. Barrels rose from $1.2675 per pound on Monday to $1.29 by Friday. Because of these higher prices, the Class III price for March 2001 is expected to be $11.39 per cwt.

AQUATIC PLANT GROWTH CONTROL

FOR CONTROL OF UNWANTED AQUATIC WEEDS AND ALGAE

The problem of suppressing unwanted Aquatic Growth has never had a simpler solution. AQUASHADE works on a basic scientific principle. THE LIGHT REDUCTION PRINCIPLE

AQUASHADE IS:

- Economical, because it's long lasting.
- Non-toxic, no harm to humans, livestock, fish, wildlife and turf (EPA Registered)
- Non-killing, because it controls growth by suppressing.
- Easy to use by just pouring.
- Beautifying, by coloring water to a natural teal blue.

BG-34 Perennial RYE GRASS

A winterhardy blend of the best late maturing diploid varieties of perennial ryegrass from Europe. The combination of winter hardiness and late maturity has made this blend very popular. Used pure or in a mix with White clover, it provides extremely high quality forage. People who graze BG-34 report increases of milk production up to 10 pounds of milk per cow per day.

• BARALFA 54

Proven track record

• BARALFA 42 IQ and BARALFA 32 IQ

Extremely high feed quality

NEW BARAULA ORCHARDGRASS

Late maturing and winterhardy! Developed in The Netherlands and is listed in many European countries (including Germany and Switzerland). It is one of the latest maturing varieties available today. Not only is Baraula very winterhardy, it is also highly digestible even after the first cutting. It has proven to withstand severe winters and is also capable of enduring dry and hot summers.

CLOVERS

Alice White is a new variety in the US and is a truly improved variety. It has large leaves and grows to medium height. Alice has shown tremendous nitrogen fixing benefits for the grass that grows with it. Alice is persistent and winterhardy making it the perfect companion for pastures.

Barbian White is a small leaved and very persistent White clover. This makes it a perfect variety for sheep, goat and horses. It also is the clover of choice if high traffic is anticipated.

Lancaster 4-H Swine Club Reorganizes

The club elected the following officers: Derick Bollinger, president (nine years in 4-H); Jeff Nolt, vice president (nine years in 4-H); Ashley Kreider, treasurer (seven years in 4-H); Tiffany Dean, assistant treasurer

(seven years in 4-H); Nicole Kreider, secretary (eight years in 4-H); Joelynn Donough, assistant secretary (six years in 4-H); Wayne Powell II, news reporter (four years in 4-H); Andy Hughes, news reporter (five years in 4-H); Sara Graybill, social chairman (nine years in 4-H); and Brian Geib, social chairman (seven years in 4-H).

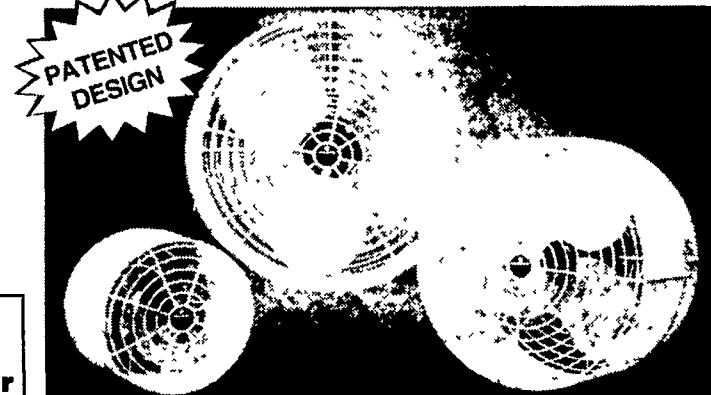

The next meeting will be April 17 at 7 p.m. at the New Holland Sales Stables. The program will include showmanship, fitting, judging, and feeder pig selection.

Bradley Hilty: 'Treat Your Dairy As A Business'

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent
BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — "You have to treat your dairy as a business," Bradley Hilty of the Penn State Dairy Alliance told those who attended the Somerset County 2001 Dairy Day, coordinated by the Somerset County Cooperative Extension.

Hilty discussed the keys that lead to a profitable operation for the dairy owner.

Since the 1960s and the arrival of stainless steel bulk tanks that quickly made the clumsy silver milk cans obsolete, dairies have been on shifting sands.

To comply with more stringent regulations, farmers were required to make other changes in their dairy operations. In 2001 farmers are still confronted with changes. Adapting isn't always easy, but the right strategies can greatly improve the potential for profits.

Hilty said a strategic business plan is the most important key to build a profitable dairy business.

First, determine now where you are. What needs to happen to accomplish an objective? Perhaps taking a series of smaller steps to revamp the operation would be more beneficial than opting for a giant leap.

Second, do your best to control aspects of your business that can be controlled — milk production, milk price, and risks. Guard against expending valuable energy on those that cannot be controlled.

From the harvest to storing and feeding it, forage quality must be maintained for the herd. Preservatives, feeding a balanced ration, and regular testing of forages are important.

Cow comfort will definitely score a bulls eye in higher production and a reduction of the cull rate.

A good accounting system, good production records, and knowing how to spot strengths and weaknesses are crucial to success. Individual farmers must know the costs of production in their own operation.

A management team of advisors can save time and money for the farmer. Getting everyone together in one place an hour at a time could easily reap greater benefits than discussing related issues, separately, with the veterinarian, the consultant, the accountant, and so forth. The farmer is then ready to evaluate the combined information and decide what will best work for him or her.

Wise consideration should precede any investment. A cow, for instance will bring a fast payback, whereas a major expansion project takes 7 to 8 years.

Enterprise analysis was the 8th key, followed by emphasizing strengths and controlling expenses.

At times, paying for the services of a veterinarian or consultant are necessary expenses. If the farmer isn't alert, however, these professional services can also be nonproductive expenses.

"Do what you are good at," he recommended.

To one farmer, specialization might mean he produces milks only and purchases feed elsewhere. There also is a market for specialty products; however, have the market established before you start to produce specialty products, Hilty says.

Since 1969 the trend shows fewer, but larger, dairies. Nationally, the average herd size is 100 cows. In New York herd size averages 92 cows and in Pennsylvania, 64 cows, according to the figures Hilty provided on a handout.

Production is increasing. The top herds are producing 26-28,000, but the national average is 17,764. In New York it is 17,175 and in Pennsylvania, 17,745.

David Pullen from DMI Consulting, when presenting the "2001 Feed Odyssey," said: "Dairying would be very easy if we didn't have to freshen cows," and proceeded to explain how feeding problems can develop during that critical period. Forage quality is very important.

He also talked about cow foot problems. Keeping records will show a trend whether the difficulty stems from the environment or from something seasonal, instead.

Miguel Savioff, Somerset County extension agent covered, "Benchmarks and Bottlenecks" in his presentation.

"High performance and profitability is your goal," Savioff said. He explained a benchmark is a point of reference and a starting point while a bottleneck is a restriction in the product pipeline (production system).

Bottlenecks in the dairy operation can occur almost anywhere. As soon as possible, these areas should be identified and corrected.

From the White Oak Veterinary Clinic, Dr. David Welch provided information on Johnes Disease. "It is a chronic debilitating disease of cattle," he said, explaining it is related to the same bacteria that causes tuberculosis and is characterized by diarrhea and weight loss. There is no feasible treatment and no vaccine available but he says Johnes can be beat with calf management.

"Think about prevention," Dr. Welch said, "not treatment."

Richard Stup from the Penn State Dairy Alliance urged team building as an advantage to the dairy farmer. Also, writing a Standard Operating Procedure (SOP). These will put everyone on the track of moving toward the same goal.

"You have to learn how to develop people," he said. "A manager needs to be a coach. Telling people why they are doing something is better than just telling them what to do."

Somerset extension 4-H/Dairy agent Joanne Stotzfus, using information provided by Michael L. O'Connor, Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science, Pennsylvania State University, presented "Tips to Improve Herd Reproductive Performance."

Dr. Lawrence Hutchinson from the Department of Veterinary Science, Penn State, addressed the topic: "Using Dairy Advisory Teams In Your Farm."

"A lot of dairy farmers have a dairy advisory team there already and just don't know it," he said, recommending some 4-6 persons compose the group.

While they aren't organized, the dairy owner, nonetheless, uses a consultant, a veterinarian, an accountant, plus family and employees for information. He retains decision-making power.

Hutchinson said that foot and mouth disease is not a new disease, but a new concern. He also touched on "mad cow disease," or BSE, and talked about the Pennsylvania Quality Assurance Program.

Dorothy Bromley, the extension educator and family living agent in Somerset, discussed how to reduce the E. Coli risk and passed around related handouts.

One of those present, Harold Shaulis, a dairy farmer from near Somerset appreciated the program. "These are things we need to address now," he said.

"Different people need different skills. Everyone at this meeting will take something home they can use," he said. Shaulis is president of the Somerset County Farm Bureau.

Dave Fava from Scenery Hill in Washington County was interested in attending because three of the presenters are on the dairy advisory team at Co-Hill Farms, where he holds the herdsman position. The farm of 200-head of registered Holsteins is part of the Dairy Alliance, Fava said.

"The meeting was very educational," he said.

Enos Tice of Salisbury said he thought the issues being presented were relevant. "I think farmers need to pay more attention to details," he said.

Holstein Foundation Announces Education Seminars

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Donna Beal, executive director of the Holstein Foundation, has announced the Foundation's education seminar program for Holstein Association USA's National Convention in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Friday, June 29 and Saturday, June 30.

Surveys completed by attendees following the 2000 National Convention rated the Foundation's education programs as excellent, particularly Carl Theunis' talk on the "Future of Dairying from a Producer's Perspective." Beal said, "Holstein Foundation Trustees have made new program development a priority. We have been delighted to work with Holstein Association USA staff and board leadership to integrate the important business in which convention attendees participate with added education value."

Celebrate Change

Building on Carl Theunis' message of hope, humor, and success, Jolene Brown will make a presentation to convention attendees on Friday, June 29 at 9 a.m. on the "Celebration of Change." Brown has received the "Certified Speaking Professional" designation, the highest earned designation of professional speaking achievement from the National Speakers Association.

She has been a guest for television and radio broadcasts throughout the U.S. and Canada and is a published writer. Brown blends her many roles as farm partner with husband, Keith, mom of two daughters, and an active supporter of community and church activities, with her professional speaking career. Brown is also one of the most highly-rated presenters at the Holstein Foundation's Young Dairy Leaders Institute.

Biotechnology, Transgenics
Following Jolene Brown's presentation on Friday, June 29, at 10:15 a.m., Dr. Thomas Bailey and Brian Lowry will present information on the topics of transgenics and biotechnology.

Bailey was formerly with the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine at Virginia Tech University as professor of large animal production medicine with an emphasis on dairy production. While at Virginia Tech, he was associated with Pharmaceutical Proteins Limited, the producer of Dolly, the sheep; the cloned bull, Mr. Jefferson; and the production of transgenic cattle. He is a technical service specialist and veterinarian with Monsanto Dairy Business.

Brian Lowry is director of industry affairs and freedom to operate for Monsanto's animal agriculture sector. He has participated in World Trade Organization meetings and negotiations for the Protocol on Biosafety in Montreal, Canada and Cartagena, Colombia from 1997-99.

Lowry began his career as assistant dean of the School of Fine Arts at Washington University, and practiced law in Kansas City, Mo. before joining Monsanto. Lowry is a participant in authoring the second book by the Crucible Group on the preservation of biological resources and biodiversity and the applicability of the intellectual property laws to such.

Politics Of Disease?
The Brave New

World Of Dairy Production In The 21st Century

On Saturday morning, June 30, at 10:45 a.m., Dr. Lonnie King will deliver a talk to convention attendees. In preparing for his talk with Holstein Foundation staff, King said, "At the hinge of the 21st century our societal problems and issues of production agriculture have become progressively more connected, complex, and difficult. The driving forces of globalization, technological advances, emerging diseases and public health, consumerism, population growth, and the well-being of our animals, environment, and ecosystems will permanently change the entire landscape of food-animal production industries. Because of these forces, our industries will increasingly face greater social and political criticism and scrutiny as we struggle to confront these forces and change the relationship between our industries and a more skeptical public."

King's talk will describe these forces and our future in more detail and also offer new strategies and actions that will be critical to succeed in this "brave new world."

King is dean of the College of Veterinary Medicine at Michigan State University. As dean, he is the chief executive officer for academic programs, research, the teaching hospital, animal health diagnostic laboratory, basic and clinical science departments, and the outreach and continuing education programs.

Prior to his appointment as dean in 1996, King was administrator for the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), USDA, in Washington, D.C. In this role, he provided executive leadership and direction for ensuring the health and care of animals and plants to improve agricultural productivity and competitiveness, and to contribute to the national economy and public health. King has served as president of the Association of American Veterinary Medical Colleges from 1999-2000 and is the vice chair for the National Commission on Veterinary Economic Issues.

Additional early bird seminars are being developed by Holstein Association staff and Iowa convention planners. Visit www.holsteinusa.com for more information on these seminars and other events at the 2001 National Holstein Convention.

The Fertility Specialists

Holstein Association To Address Extreme Records

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — The Holstein Association strives to make sure that customers have access to the most complete information possible.

As part of this effort, the Holstein Association will begin labeling records which contain extreme data such as a very high fat or protein test or milk weight. In addition to the label, more information on these records will be provided here at www.holsteinusa.com.

As production records are received by the Holstein Association, they are analyzed for any extreme data. If such information is found, the owner is notified that their animal's record qualifies for a label. The owners may in some cases request that this extreme data be removed from the calculation of the cow's record, if they deem that such data is not an accurate reflection of the cow's producing ability.

If any extreme data remains, the records will be marked with an "X" to let users of that information know that extreme data is included in that record. If users would like more information on the extreme record, they can visit this site, www.holsteinusa.com. Under the "Free Stuff" button, users will be able to access an easy to use query to view specific test-day data, including testing frequency and completeness, level of supervision, and milk, fat, and protein measurements.

Pennsylvania Rural Leadership (RULE) Program Accepting Applicants

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Rural Leadership (RULE) Program is accepting applicants for a two-year leadership training initiative.

The initiative helps rural residents to develop their leadership skills as they improve the quality of life in their local communities. The program focuses on developing participants' communication skills, visualization skills, personal leadership and understanding of specific community issues.

RULE is accepting applications until July 30. Adult rural Pennsylvania residents (or those with rural constituencies) will be judged on experience, needs and potential. Consideration will be given to applicants' interests, diverse backgrounds, and demonstrated commitment to community involvement and solving public issues.

The first year of the training will emphasize local, regional and state public policy issues. The second year addresses national and international issues.

Applications or more information can be obtained from: RULE, The Pennsylvania State University, 6 Armsby Building, University Park, PA 16802; or by calling (814) 863-4679.

Area Students Take Part In Business Leadership Training

MILLIE BUNTING
Market Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — To learn about the cooperative way of doing business, 20 area high school students attended a Business Leadership Training (BLT) Seminar conducted Tuesday by the Southeast Pennsylvania Cooperative Council at the Farm and Home Center.

A similar seminar was conducted at the Lebanon County Expo Center Thursday with 27 students registered.

Jerry Phillips, program co-ordinator and senior loan officer of MidAtlantic Farm Credit, welcomed the students and explained the Cooperative Council's emphasis in the seminars is "to work together and to learn together."

Winifred McGee, Lebanon

County extension agent, led off the program with an "ice breaker" activity in which three groups were formed to work on a project. Each group was given a box containing similar materials and instructed to build a tower within 20 minutes.

McGee explained that each group would have people designated to play the "roles people play" or could play in a group or organization. She explained those roles as follows: Initiator — gets thing started, could be the leader; Blocker — disagrees with everything; Involver — the cheerleader; Idea Tester — says what will work, the scientist; Special Interest Representative — promotes his or her own ideas seemingly in the best interest of others; Facilitator — helps group achieve goals, might be parent; and Observer — the one who gets the clipboard and tries to figure out what each one is doing.

Equipped with assorted boxes, cardboard, newspapers, toilet paper, and masking tape, the results of the exercise were quite different. McGee led a discussion on each activity and what was learned. She noted that each group accomplished what they were told to do and followed instructions. Each "tower" turned out differently because of those who were involved.

She provided a detailed account of the three different types of roles — task, maintenance, individual — and how they can be used in dealing with people.

Jeff Stoltzfus, Eastern Lancaster County Young Farmer adviser, spoke about the Pennsylvania Cooperative Council's (PCC)

Summer Institute at Shippensburg High School June 24-27. Paul Hostetter, a member of the Hans Herr FFA Chapter (Lancaster Mennonite High School) provided a slide presentation about the four-day state camp he attended at Shippensburg University in 1999.

Troy Wenger, Manheim FFA, showed slides and described the National Cooperative's institute he attend in Nashville, Tenn. From the students attending the area cooperative workshops, about 10-15 are chosen to attend the state camp and from there several are selected to go to the national institute this year in Atlanta, Ga.

Stoltzfus led a workshop exercise in business management and several students were chosen to take part in various enterprises. It was a practical hands-on demonstration with each student having a scripted role in the discussion of business decisions. Following this, the students divided into three groups, with each told to organize a business.

Taking part in the active sessions were junior and senior high school FFA members from Ephrata, Garden Spot, Lancaster Mennonite, Manheim Central, Penn Manor, in Lancaster County and Tulpehocken in Berks County.

During lunch, the students participated in a cooperative "Who Wants to be a Millionaire?" and "Trivial Pursuit" competitions.

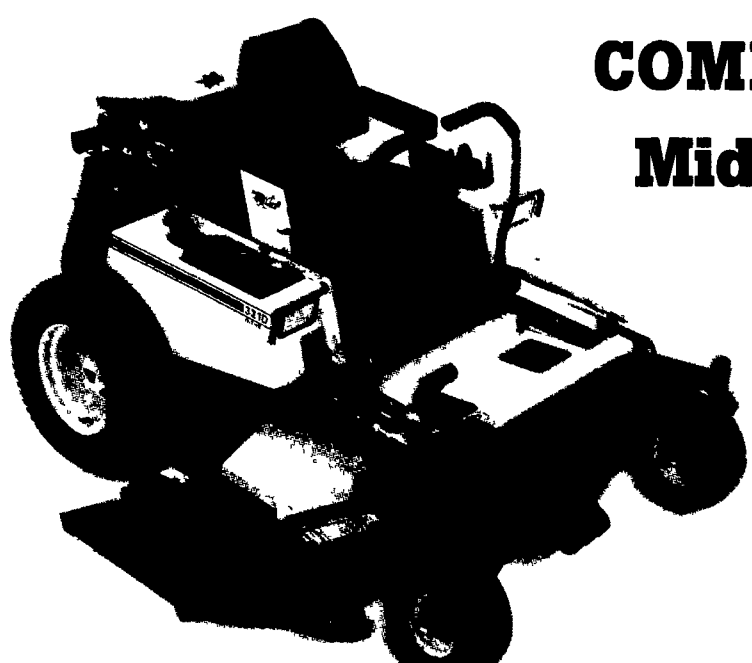

After the lunch and game period, the students took a test on cooperatives which was part of the selection process for being chosen to attend the PCC Summer Institute.

Jeff Stoltzfus, Eastern Lancaster County Young Farmer adviser, far right, spoke about the Pennsylvania Cooperative Council's (PCC) Summer Institute at Shippensburg High School. Stoltzfus also led a workshop exercise in business management, and several students were chosen to take part in various enterprises.

Equipped with assorted boxes, cardboard, newspapers, toilet paper, and masking tape, the results of the exercise were quite different with the students involved.

Corn Prices Drift With StarLink, Ag Economist Says

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The StarLink controversy has yet to wind its way out of the corn markets, as decreased U.S. exports to Japan — a major buyer — will likely increase overall U.S. ending stocks by 50 million bushels, according to a monthly report issued Thursday by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The USDA projects a U.S. carryout of 1.941 billion bushels, or an increase from 1.891 billion bushels projected last month. Yet, agricultural economist Allan Lines, Ohio State University, thinks USDA's carryout numbers may be "too optimistic" as competitor nations rush to supply Japan's needs.

"China's exports are up significantly, and Argentina's exports were raised by 1.2 million metric tons," Lines said. "My personal option is that this could really raise the carryout from what USDA is projecting."

Piling on the woe is a 10 percent reduction in corn exports from one year ago. Time to make it up is vanishing as the marketing year is halfway through, Lines said. If 2000/2001 exports matched one year ago's, the projected carryout would be about 1.7 billion bushels, not the projected 1.941 billion, he said.

Meanwhile, a 15-million-bushel increase in soybean exports wasn't enough to muster any courage from USDA's price projections, which dropped by about 10 cents per bushel. USDA is projecting a price range of $4.45-4.65 per bushel, compared to February's $4.50-4.80 per bushel projection. The average price for the 1999/2000 crop is $4.63 per bushel.

USDA projects a soybean carryout of 330 million bushels, down by 15 million bushels since last month, but still 40 million bushels above the 290-million-bushel carryin to this marketing year. That's still a lot of beans to do any good for prices, Lines said.

In terms of processed beans, domestic crush is holding steady, while meal exports aren't getting a lift as an alternative to Europe's ban on meat and bone meal feed resulting from the "mad" cow disease scare.

"We are coming to grips with the reality that the United States is not going to realize the euphoric thought we'd be sending more meal to Europe to replace the feeds lost to the meat and bone meal ban."

Despite Thursday's report, the real news is yet to come, Lines said. The trade is waiting on USDA's planting intentions report scheduled for release on March 30, Lines said. That report will help to indicate the potential size of this year's production based on the amount of acreages farmers intent to plant.

USDA gave a peek at what could be in store at its annual agricultural outlook meetings last month. USDA expects farmers to plant one million acres more of soybeans, which could raise the September 2002 carryout to 475 million bushels from the current 330 million bushels projected for the 2000-harvested crop.

"There's a general agreement that soybean ending stocks will go up, and prices will go down," Lines said.

However, some of USDA's preliminary planting intentions numbers don't agree with Lines' arithmetic. USDA is projecting 3.1 million fewer acres of corn and wheat, leaving him wondering the fate of an unaccounted 2.1 million acres. The question is how much of that amount will be shifted to soybeans, which would be "more negative pressure than USDA would seem to suggest."

"I have a hard time believing that farmers will leave 2.1 million acres unplanted," Lines said.

Tractor and Farm Machinery Safety Education Program

WEST CHESTER, (Chester Co.) — Chester County Cooperative Extension will sponsor two tractor and farm machinery safety education programs throughout the month of April.

The northern session will be held at the West Nantmeal Township Building along Rt. 82, approximately one mile south of Elverson. This class will be held on Tuesdays, April 10, 17, 24, and May 1; 6:30-9 p.m.; A driving test will be given on Sat., May 5 at 8 a.m.

The southern session will be held at Deer Creek Equipment on Thursdays, April 5, 12, 19, and 26; 6:30-9 p.m.; with a driving test on Sat., May 5 at noon.

The cost is $15 per participant and registration should be made by contacting the Chester County extension office at (610) who wish to work on a farm, other than their parents, are required to have a Department of Labor certificate (awarded by Chester County Extension) indicating that they completed and passed this course.

It is also an excellent opportunity for farm youth and young adults who are already operating machinery to better familiarize themselves with important farm safety concerns.

The highest percentages of farm accidents involving children occur to the farmers' own children. They will not become excellent tractor drivers in 14 hours, but hopefully they will acquire the awareness and knowledge necessary to become safe and careful operators.

Course material will cover tractor controls, instruments, maintenance and safety checks as well as starting and stopping. The dangers of tractor roll-over and corn picker operation will be emphasized.

Tractor safety on the road, an increasing problem in Chester County, will be discussed as well. Machinery operation will include the use of hitches, PTO and hydraulics. Students will have some time to practice driving a tractor and the final session will include demonstrating some basic tractor hook-up and driving skills along with a written test.

696-3500 or e-mail at ChesterExt@psu.edu. Please respond as quickly as possible, since either course may be cancelled if there is not enough participation.

This course is designed to give youth 14 hours of classroom and hands-on training in the safe operation of farm tractors and some farm machinery. Young people between the ages of 14 and 16

Sullivan Appointed To Direct DEP Department

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Secretary James M. Seif recently announced the appointment of Michael Sullivan of Dauphin County as director of DEP's Bureau of Personnel.

"We are pleased that Mike is joining our agency because he brings a wealth of personnel experience that will benefit the department," Seif said.

Sullivan has served the Commonwealth in various personnel-related positions for 14 years. He most recently supervised the Classification Grievance Unit at the Office of Administration. Previously he served as a personnel analyst with that office and the Department of Public Welfare.

Sullivan, 37, earned his Bachelor of Science in Business Administration at Shippensburg University.

Progressive Dairymen's Cooperative Meets In Troy

TROY (Bradford Co.) — Edgewood Restaurant, Troy, was the place, 12 noon was the time, and Feb. 24 the date for the Annual Meeting of Progressive Dairymen's Cooperative. Bradford County Dairy Princess Corissa Coolbaugh with the assistance of Dairy Maids served milk, punch and cheese and crackers as members and guests assembled before the meeting.

Progressive Dairymen's Cooperative President Douglas Stewart of Rome, conducted the meeting. He introduced Gary Henit Cooperative Extension Dairy Specialist, who presented a program outlining several Penn State Cooperative Extension services available to dairy farmers. Included were research on Johnne's disease, mastitis control, and biosecurity issues. Henit also pointed to the Cornell Mastitis Control Program which is available to dairy farmers in other states as well as New York.

President Stewart reported that although Progressive has lost members due to sell-offs, new member sign-ups are making up most of the difference in numbers. Stewart highlighted anticipated changes that will be coming with further coordination between DairyLea and DFA to consolidate trucking schedules and eliminate duplication of efforts. This will result in better hauling rates for members. He also announced an increase in member's premiums of 10 cents/CWT, beginning with January milk shipped.

James G. Patsos, CEO of United Ag Services, an umbrella cooperative providing management services, accounting, and payroll service for small cooperative, ag-related business, and individual farmers, presented quality awards to the top 10 percent of Progressive Dairymen's members. Receiving awards were first: John and Teresa Neiley, Camptown; second: Rich Carnwright, Mainesburg; third: RO-SA Acres, Warren Center; and tie for fourth and fifth: Douglas and Donna Stewart, Rome, and Paul Allen, Granville Summit. Patsos gave a brief explanation of the way producers' milk checks are calculated under the revised Federal Order system. He also said the Middlebury Center plant will remain open, and will act as a drying and balancing plant. Presently, whey is being dried there.

Elected as directors were: Donald Chamberlain, Mansfield; Douglas Stewart, Rome; and Kress Simpson, also of Mansfield.

At the conclusion of the meeting, producer patronage dividend checks were distributed to members who were present and those not present received their checks by mail.

The Board of Directors met after the general membership meeting and re-elected the present officers.

4-H Instructors To Receive Disability Training

FAIRFAX, Va. — Every so often, an event takes place that has great national significance beyond its size.

One such event will be conducted for 150 people in the small community of Trout Run, Pa., April 7-8.

The annual Pennsylvania 4-H Shooting Sports Instructor Conference will focus its full attention and resources on learning how to accommodate youth with a variety of physical disabilities.

This statewide meeting marks the first time in U.S. history that a large chapter of a major youth organization has provided their instructors with specific training in the important areas of gun safety, responsibility, and proficiency, as it relates to a youngster with a disability.

The conference will feature instruction by Dave Baskin, manager of NRA Disabled Shooting Services. Baskin is also the long-time head coach of the U.S. Disabled Shooting Team, which has compiled the record of 243 medals won, while setting seven world and 16 Pan-American records in international competitions.

As chairman of Shooting Sports (1996-2000) for the International Paralympic Committee, he was instrumental in the formulation of the disabled shooting rules and is considered the leading expert on disability related shooting sports function. In May of 2000, Baskin became the eighth individual to be presented the Shooting Industry's Academy of Excellence Award and joined such former recipients as William Ruger, Wayne LaPierre, and Charlton Heston.

Baskin's experience will provide the participants with an insight into the early history, customs, correct terminology, demographic patterns, accessibility issues, and medical considerations, of active young people with a disability. In addition, his audience will learn about the theory and technical aspects of the accepted adaptive shooting positions for rifle, pistol, muzzleloading, archery, and shotgun operation.

Capitol Region Agronomy Team Report

GOT LIME?
NITROGEN FERTILIZERS LOWER SOIL PH
Mark Goodson
York County
Extension Agent

The optimum soil pH for most Pennsylvania-grown agronomic crops is 6.0 to 7.0 alfalfa, soybeans, and barley need 6.5 to 7.0 for optimum growth.

Keeping the soil pH within the optimum range maximizes availability of the essential mineral plant nutrients (N, P, K, Ca, Mg, and S) in the soil. When the pH is right, the minerals are available to plant roots, soil herbicides work better, and beneficial soil organisms are healthier.

Leaching, erosion, crop uptake of calcium, magnesium, potassium, decaying plant residues, and acids exuded by roots, all lower soil pH. Nitrogen fertilizers that supply or become ammonium nitrogen in the soil also lower soil pH. Examples of these materials are liquid nitrogen solutions, ammonium nitrate, ammonium sulfate, urea and animal manures.

The acid produced by one pound of nitrogen supplied from dry urea or urea-ammonium nitrate (UAN) nitrogen solutions requires three pounds of calcium carbonate to neutralize it. A pound of nitrogen from diammonium phosphate (DAP) requires over five-and-a-quarter pounds of calcium carbonate to neutralize the acid it produces. Seven pounds of calcium carbonate are required to neutralize the acid generated from one pound of nitrogen from ammonium sulfate!

Topdressing small grains this spring will acidify the soil. A soil topdressed with 100 pounds of N from a 50-50 blend of urea and ammonium sulfate will consume about 430 pounds of calcium carbonate equivalent — about a quarter-ton of lime consumed in just that one operation! Corn ground supplied with 150 pounds of nitrogen from liquid UAN will consume about the same amount of limestone — around 500 pounds.

The message here is to be aware that the carbonates in limestone are consumed quickly neutralizing acidity from nitrogen-containing fertilizers and manure. As these carbonates are used up and pH slips down, availability of all mineral plant food nutrients is affected.

In no-till situations, the acid generated by the nitrogen fertilizers and manure form an "acid-roof" in the surface inch or so of the soil having a much lower pH than the topsoil horizon. This acid-roof will affect herbicide performance as well as seedling vigor. In extreme cases, it can kill seedlings.

When pH-sensitive crops such as barely, alfalfa, and soybeans are sown in soils following crops that received applications of nitrogen and/or manure without correcting pH with ag lime, growth and yields will be below optimum.

Now Is The Time To Apply Nitrogen To Your Green Spirit Ryegrass.

HOW SWEET IT IS!!! Cows Love The Sweet Taste Of BG23+ Pasture Blend

BG 23+ is a blend of Barenburg's best diploid and tetraploid perennial ryegrass, their grazing timothy, Alice white clover and a good red clover. It is late maturing and loves (and needs) moisture thus making it suited for those wet bottom lands. Cows will be very contented on BG23+ pasture and very likely pick up in milk production. Very high in protein and digestibility. Makes great balage too.

Angus Journal Land Steward Nominations Due May 15

Junior Angus members ages 14 to 21 will want to plan now to attend the 2001 LEAD (Leaders Engaged in Angus Development) Conference, August 2-5 in Nashville, Tenn. This year's conference, "A Cut Above the Rest," will feature industry speakers, leadership workshops by the National Junior Angus Association (NJAA) board of directors, and a day of tours in the Nashville area.

Motivational speakers Stewart and Casey Kennedy will highlight the event and will interact with the young Angus leaders throughout the week. In addition,

Angus producers and other industry spokespeople will visit with the young leaders.

A full day of touring Nashville and its sites is planned. Those in attendance will be able to learn about the history of country music while visiting the Grand Ole Opry Museum. They will also tour the Hermitage, home of president Andrew Jackson, cruise on the Cumberland River on the General Jackson, and take in a performance at the Grand Ole Opry.

Finally, the 12 directors of the NJAA board will conduct workshops, which will teach about etiqquette and interviews, paradigm shifts and country dancing. As usual, an industry game show will also take place that allows the participants to compete for prizes and test their industry knowledge.

For more information about 2001 LEAD, contact the junior activities department at (816) 383-5100, or access registration online at HYPERLINK "http://www.angus.org/njaa". The early registration fee is $175 for juniors and $125 for advisors. All registrations and medical release forms are due June 15 to receive the early pricing.

Loan Provisions For 2000-Crop Honey

POTTSVILLE (Schuylkill Co.) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has announced details for the Honey Nonrecourse Marketing Assistance Loan and Loan Deficiency Payment Program on 2000-crop honey, according to Terry Stehr for Schuylkill County Farm Service Agency.

"The honey nonrecourse marketing assistance loan rate for the 2000-crop honey is $0.65 per pound for all eligible honey," Terry Stehr said.

There is a loan service fee equal to the smaller of .005 times the gross loan amount or $45 per loan, plus $3 for each additional lot applies. The final date for requesting a nonrecourse marketing assistance honey loan or obtaining an LDP is Thursday, April 12.

"All outstanding recourse honey loans will be converted to nonrecourse marketing assistance honey loans," Terry Stehr said. Producers will be required to sign new loan documents for the converted loans.

Because the loan rate for nonrecourse marketing assistance loans is higher than the loan rate for the recourse honey by $0.65 per pound, and additional disbursement equivalent to $0.06 will be made."

The maturity date for the nonrecourse marketing assistance loan will remain unchanged from the converted recourse honey loan.

Terry Stehr said producers may repay outstanding loans at the lesser of principal, plus interest, or the alternative repayment rate in effect on the date the repayment is received in the county Farm Service Agency office on or before the maturity date of the loan.

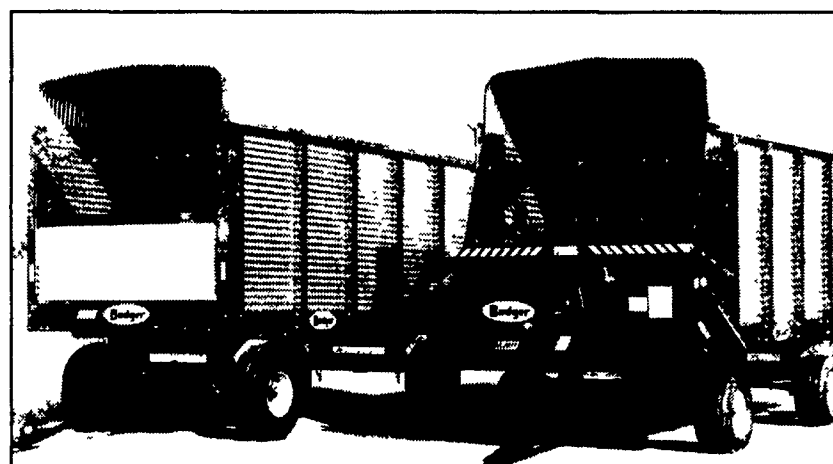

The marketing assistance loan repayment rate will be announced monthly. This same rate will be used to calculate the amount of the LDP.

New with the 2000-crop honey program is the ability of a producer to obtain a LDP. LDP's are available to those producers who, although they are eligible to obtain a nonrecourse marketing assistance honey loan, agree to forgo the loan in return for a payment on the eligible honey equivalent to the market gain on the nonrecourse loan.

Eligible producers who already marketed their 2000-crop honey may obtain LDP's based on the date beneficial interest in the honey was lost.

Both honey nonrecourse marketing assistance loans and LDP's were authorized by the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 2001.

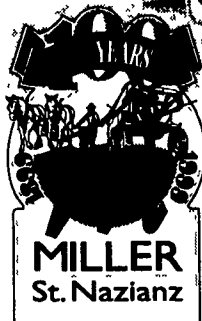

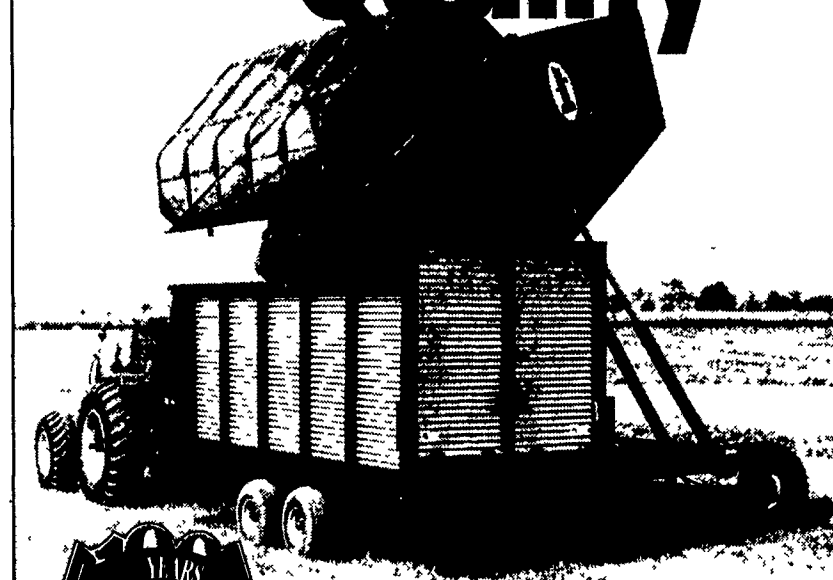

Further information is available at local FSA offices and Department of Agriculture Services Centers, which are usually listed in telephone directories under "United States Government."

A Structure 'So Simple, It Works'

and tearing our pastures up," said Ned.

Quickly realizing that a central place to feed was a necessity, they first thought of a constructing a slab for the round hay bales. In the meantime, however, a neighbor mentioned that the Natural Resources Conservation Service, at that time known as the Soil Conservation Service, would help with plans and possibly cost-share dollars for manure pit development.

Finally the Sayres formulated a plan which combined not only a feedbunk but also a manure management facility.

The 8-foot by 50-foot feed bunk has 10-foot curbed alleys on both sides. The attached manure pit measures 30 feet by 30 feet and slopes to an end depth of 50 inches. A picket drain and 200-foot settling terrace drains the water from the pit.

"It's not just a pit, it's a whole system," said Ned. "One part will not work without everything else. Everything works together."

A hay shed nearby lends itself to fast feeding. An adjoining shed offers a place for cows having trouble calving.

"It works so well. The biggest advantage is the health of the cattle. We haven't treated a single case of calf scours this winter. It's all because the cows' udders are clean since they're not out knee deep in mud," Lawrason said.

"We also do not tear up the pasture the way we used to. For us, in this part of the country, the environmental benefits are important. That was the main thing when we first started thinking about this — we were trying to get away from the mud and runoff into the creek."

The farm is located eight miles from the headwaters of the Chesapeake Bay.

The structure is scraped when the feedbunk is refilled, usually once a week or twice every three weeks, depending on the number of animals using it.

"We will let this compost over the summer and spread it in the fields when we're finished grazing this fall," said Ned. "We can target where we need it, according to the nutrient management plans. It is a reasonable amount of fertilizer that would have normally been lost."

Approximately 30 percent or even more of the hay is saved with this structure, they estimate, as opposed to feeding in rings.

Future Plans

Next on the Sayre's agenda is to put a shed roof over the structure to not only protect the feed but also eliminate the need for the picket drain in the corner and outlying terrace, since the rain would not be washing through the manure pit.

An improvement, according to Lawrason, would be to widen the alleys from 10 to 12 feet to give more room for the animals to walk. The feed bunk, eight feet wide, is "a little big wider than it needs to be for the cows, but we can use any of our farm's tractors to put hay in it," said Ned.

The structure was constructed in 1992 and followed by another similar structure a year later. To help spread the innovation, the NRCS sent the plans all over the country.

According to Lawrason, because of these mail outs Waffle Hill Farm has had calls from Wisconsin, Kansas, Alabama, Oregon, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Maryland from producers interested in duplicating the structure.

The idea for change came from far-off sources. Lawrason's oldest daughter worked at "stations" or ranches in New Zealand, and during a visit by Lawrason and Jane, "he saw the emphasis on grass management and intensive grazing," said Ned, "and that sold Dad on making changes here. It was the right time for trying something different."

Other aspects of the farm also show the Sayres' commitment to wise management of their resources. Having the entire farm planted to permanent sod cover provides built in buffering to control surface water runoff.

The cattle are rotated to minimize their impact on the creek and its banks. Additionally, the family is taking steps to plant 500-600 trees along the creek as an additional buffer.

Recently Ned served on a committee of agriculture representatives to help write Maryland's nutrient regulations, besides being active in cattle organizations and Farm Bureau.

Grass-Based System

Lawrason, a former civil engineer, purchased the farm in 1960. The youngest of four children, Ned has lived at Waffle Hill Farm all of his life. Three hundred acres plus rented acreage for the calves and heifers make up the farm. The Sayres both work full-time on the farm, aided by other family members working part-time.

In four to five years the farm had phased completely out of corn production and in 1989 planted their last corn crop.

Since 1990 the Sayres have "been fine-tuning and continuing to learn and change things as we've gotten better at managing grass. We've definitely increased the size of the herd and our carrying capacity," Ned said.

"We're learning how to handle grass and manage it. It's not a sudden shift. We're learning timing and rotations," he said. "When we got more confident with it and converted to grass and hay we backed down on corn production. We've started to select for lines of animals that are adapted and have optimum efficiency with our system."

"You have to put your whole-hearted time and effort into it," said Ned. "Our pastures are our crop ground, so we dedicate our management to making them as productive as possible. Cattle are the most efficient harvesters, so we try to maximize their use. We make hay to capture the surplus when grass growth exceeds the herd's ability to keep up with it."

The Sayres raise and sell about 30 bulls per year through various outlets, while 10-15 steers sold as freezer beef keep them focused on carcass traits. Females are marketed as replacements to both purebred and commercial producers.

Other Winners

Second place went to Joe Pattie, Harrison, Ark, who was recognized for developing a hydraulic round bale scale mounted on a tractor. Kin Lindsey, Jayton, Texas, won third place with a syringe "coozie," pipe insulation slipped over the barrel of the syringe which protects vaccinations.

The farm is a cow calf operation with 140 registered Angus cows in northeastern Maryland.

Only one person is needed to scrape the alleys and refill the haybunk. The Sayres estimate the savings to be about 125 man hours during the 100-day feeding period since they transitioned from feeding in hay rings.

MidAtlantic Farm Credit To Hold Stockholder Meetings

WESTMINSTER, Md. — Customers of MidAtlantic Farm Credit should mark their calendars and plan to attend one of the sectional stockholders' meetings scheduled throughout the month of April. Stockholders of the cooperative can expect to hear an update on the association's plans for 2001, enjoy a meal and fellowship with fellow stockholders and staff and entertainment at each meeting.

Registration for the meetings will begin at 6:15 p.m. with dinner being served at 7 p.m. The meeting dates and sites will be as follows:

- April 10 at Yoder's Restaurant, New Holland.
- April 11 at Holiday Inn, Fogelsville.
- April 17 at Best Western, Westminster, Md.
- April 18 at Level Fire Hall, Level, Md.
- April 19 at Venice Inn, Hagerstown, Md.
- April 23 at Modern Maturity Center in Dover, Del.
- April 24 at Somerset Civic Center, Princess Anne, Md.
- April 25 at Caroline 4-H Park, Denton, Md.

The election of directors and nominating committee members will be conducted by mail ballot this year. Historically, balloting occurred during the meetings. This change was made to MidAtlantic's policy for two reasons: one, to allow for nominations from the floor at all meeting locations, and two, to allow members to vote in the election, even if they are unable to attend the meeting. Ballots will be mailed to stockholders on May 16, the polls will close on June 14 and the results of the elections will be announced on July 9.

MidAtlantic President Bob Frazee invites all stockholders to attend the meeting most convenient to them. "Obviously, this is an important meeting as it is the first one for the consolidated MidAtlantic," he noted. "We are very proud of the results of our first year together, and we look forward to sharing this information with our stockholders."

MidAtlantic Farm Credit is the largest agricultural lender on the East Coast. Headquartered in Westminster, Md., it serves its customers through 18 branch offices located throughout the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia, Delaware, Eastern Pennsylvania and Mid-Maryland.

For the development of this structure, Lawrason and Ned Sayre of Waffle Hill Farm recently won the national "Tips for Profit" Award from the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA).

Cattlemen Play Key Role In Keeping European Diseases Out

Don Gray, Beef Producer and Chairman of the New York Beef Industry Council

Europe's most famous animal disease is back in the news lately.

From the pages of USA Today to network news programs, the press is putting Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (BSE), commonly known as "mad cow disease," on the public radar screen. A recent outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease (FMD) has added insult to injury for the already beleaguered Europeans.

All of the coverage about BSE and FMD, it seems, really boils down to one basic question: Could they happen here?

There has never been a case of BSE in the United States, and foot-and-mouth disease has not been seen in the U.S. since 1929. America's cattle producers — and our government partners — are working hard to keep it that way.

The U.S. was the first country to take aggressive prevention measures against BSE without ever having the disease within its borders. A national surveillance program, started by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in 1990, hasn't turned up a trace of BSE in U.S. cattle.

So right now, it remains a "foreign" disease confined largely to Britain and parts of Europe. In addition, a number of stringent protective measures, or firewalls, have been put in place over the last 12 years to keep the disease from every occurring here.

As for foot-and-mouth disease, American cattlemen are part of an ongoing surveillance effort that helps detect any potential disease among U.S. herds. And, whenever FMD is reported in any country, the USDA enacts a series of aggressive measures including import bans to keep it from spreading here. Because of this cooperative relationship that FMD has not been seen in the U.S. in more than 70 years.

These measures represent a combined effort by the government and the entire U.S. cattle industry to make sure the nation's beef supply remains the safest in the world. It's an effort that involves every cattleman in this state, given their strong professional and personal interest in ensuring the safety of the beef they feed the public and their own families.

Local cattlemen know firsthand what a roller coaster ride the beef industry has been on for the past few years. After a long decline in consumer demand for beef, the coaster is heading back up again, and producers have played a vital part in the industry's dramatic turnaround.

At the same time, we've seen the devastation BSE has caused in Europe — both in animal health and public confidence. Every cattleman in America knows how great a threat the so-called "mad cow disease" is to our industry and the revival we've worked so hard to achieve.

As a result, producers have been vigorous supporters of steps taken by the U.S. government to keep BSE out of this country. Because of other concerns, the United States has banned beef imports from Great Britain since 1985. Other bans, enacted in response to BSE in Europe, now prohibit the importing of live ruminants — animals like cows, goats or sheep — and all animal protein products from all of Europe.

A small number of animals that were imported from Europe before the bans were in place have been quarantined and closely monitored. The purpose of these bans is clear: to protect our borders and keep this foreign animal disease out of the United States.

Ten years of active surveillance confirm the effectiveness of these steps. As of December 2000, U.S. government labs have tested nearly 12,000 brain samples from cattle that showed even the slightest risk — including older animals, those that were non-ambulatory or had difficulty walking, and cattle with possible neurological symptoms. Not a single one of these tests has found BSE or any similar disease among U.S. cattle.

As an added level of protection, in 1997, the Food and Drug Administration banned the practice of feeding to cattle any protein supplements, such as meat and bone meal, made from cattle and other animal byproducts.

This feed ban comes in response to findings that the disease was spread in Europe by way of feed contaminated with BSE. It ensures that if BSE were ever to get into the United States, it would not spread. Both the government and the U.S. cattle industry are working to assure full compliance with this feed ban.

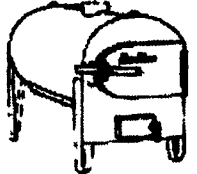

For the past two-and-a-half years, America's BSE prevention efforts have been under review by the Harvard Center for Risk Analysis. USDA asked for the review to assess the risk of BSE in this country. According to Dr. George Gray, the center's program director for food safety and agriculture, the study's preliminary findings confirm we are on the right track.

In recent statements about BSE, Dr. Gray concludes that the disease is "not likely to occur here" and further notes that "the risk that mad cow disease could happen in the USA is low, and the risk that it could spread as it did in Europe is lower still." Dr. Gray also has said that even if an infected animal shows up in this country, the safeguards in place would keep that animal out of the human food chain.

Keeping BSE and other foreign animal diseases out of this country requires the continued vigilance of the government and all segments of the cattle industry. Full compliance with all preventive measures is the only acceptable standard when the need is to protect America's cattle herd and to protect American consumers. America's cattlemen have shown they are ready to meet that standard.

Foot And Mouth Disease Grips Europe, Spreads

BILLINGS, Mont. — Flames licked at the night skies over England as workers piled livestock carcasses onto giant bonfires in snow-covered fields this week. Wholesale slaughter is considered the only way to stop the foot-and-mouth (FMD) epidemic spreading across Great Britain, which has now crossed species. In the crisis, 450 cattle, 1,300 pigs, and 250 sheep have been destroyed from the first six sites where the disease has been confirmed.

Hopes that containment of the outbreak had been achieved were dashed with confirmation of the seventh outbreak on a farm in the county of Devon. Health officials warn that the worst is yet to come.

According to Associated Press reports, British government's chief veterinary officer, Jim Sou-damore, announced Feb. 26 that he had confirmed the Devon farm had exported sheep outside of Britain to other European countries. British Agriculture Minister Nick Brown warned the European Commission of the risk that infected animals may already have been exported throughout the continent. In response to warnings, the European Union last week imposed a ban on all live animals, meat, and milk products exported from Great Britain.

As European officials race to salvage a battered livestock industry, Argentine beef producers say their governmental officials are covering up what could be a disastrous FMD outbreak in that country. Frederico Galligo, president of the Rivadavia Foundation for animal health, told CNN News that ranchers have reported 5,000 head infected with FMD. Statements like Galligo's have prompted Argentine officials to announce a vaccination program for FMD in "some high-risk areas." Argentine producers say their government is masking the truth in an all-out effort to protect its $6.9 billion global beef industry, risking a food safety crisis on an international scale.

Authorities in Germany report the slaughter of 350 imported sheep as a precaution against the European outbreak, and the Netherlands slaughtered more than 3,200 sheep, cows, pigs and deer brought from Britain before the outbreak was discovered Feb. 19. In Spain, the Ag Ministry ordered the destruction of 540 pigs imported from Britain.

A report in the March 1 edition of USA Today, said that world leaders and trade experts are beginning to question the wisdom of a global food market and freer world trade, based on how quickly the FMD outbreak has spread around the globe. Tim Lang, Professor of Food Policy at Thames Valley University told the BBC Bureau for USA Today that, "there is a burgeoning backlash against global food markets and industrialization of agriculture. The drive for cheap food has led to a massive international trade in livestock that increases the risk of disease exposure and consumer threat."

R-CALF (Ranchers Cattle-men's Action Legal Fund) President, Leo McDonnell, Columbus, MT, says those concerns are warranted, especially for U.S. producers and consumers. "Given the many reports from USDA and others, that the U.S. cattle industry has been in an overproduction stage the last several years, one has to wonder how important it is that we continue to liberalize imports into the U.S."

I think the question we need to ask is: who benefits? Certainly not the U.S. consumer who not only pays an artificially high price for these masked imports that are, for the most part, produced under different standards than required in the U.S. and are often sold under the false assumption that they are U.S. products. In fact, the past Chairman of the International Trade Commission (ITC) reported in the fall of 1999 that 'packers can and do use imports to suppress domestic (U.S.) live cattle prices. So, who benefits? I think we all know.'

For British farmers, the FMD outbreak is devastating, coming on the heels of the economic blows struck by bovine spongiform encephalopathy, or mad cow disease, which has literally removed beef from European diets, causing an implosion of domestic markets.

CNN reported that in Britain, schools near farms infected with FMD have been closed, rugby matches have been canceled, and teachers who live on farms were told to stay home. Hunts have been suspended, and officials have proposed a ban on foxhunting with hounds. A major two-week military exercise was being hastily revised because it involved the use of ground troops in an area close to an infection site. Fishing streams have been closed to anglers, and safari parks, zoos, and nature reserves were closing or keeping animals susceptible to the disease, including rhinos, giraffes, and elephants, well away from people. A park that contains deer whose bloodlines go back to the reign of Henry VIII was closed to the public to protect the herd of royal deer.

FMD, which afflicts cloven-hoofed animals, is extremely easy to spread. It can be airborne, transmitted from one animal to another, contracted through contaminated feed, or can be carried on the boots and clothing of humans who come into contact with the contagion.

McDonnell says the U.S. beef industry and political decision-makers need to sit up and take notice. "Recent reports show FMD has now spread, in terms of the number of countries involved, to nearly 60 percent of the global land mass. The recent recurrence of both clinical and non-clinical stages of FMD in Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay sends a clear message that USDA's certification time period is not long enough. I don't think it's unreasonable to look at a minimum of three to five years of 'free status' before consideration is even given to allow the importation of beef from these countries. It's important that these decisions are based on science, but it's equally important they are also balanced with prudence and common sense."

According to CNN reports, Brown urged British citizens to calm themselves as widespread concerns sparked fears of panic buying in grocery markets. "There is absolutely no need to stock up on food. There is plenty for us all," said Brown.

Worries of the FMD outbreak reaching other continents were confirmed when the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced that it would temporarily ban some imports of South African meat products because of a recent outbreak of FMD in that country.

South African officials recently reported the third outbreak of FMD since September. The products affected by the ban include imports of all ruminant animals and fresh, chilled, or frozen meat products. USDA officials say the temporary ban is expected to have very little effect on the U.S. livestock industry since South Africa accounts for less than one percent of total U.S. imports. USDA also announced that it would investigate how the virus was introduced into South Africa, which had been free of FMD for more than 44 years.

Argentine officials last week announced the implementation of FMD vaccination programs throughout that country, when Dardo Chiesa, president of the Buenos Aires and la Pampa Confederation of Rural Associations, announced publicly that producers have confirmed cases of infected animals in two Argentine provinces.

Beef producers' statements contradict Argentina's Agriculture Secretary Antonio Berhongara, who said there have been no outbreaks of the highly contagious virus. If the virus has infected livestock, Argentina faces trouble regaining its disease-free status, delaying the opening of new markets for exports of its famous grass-fed beef.

At stake is the country's $6.9 billion beef industry, which exports cattle globally, including to the U.S. Argentine officials are requesting permission to increase its beef tariff rate quotas to the U.S. from 20,000 metric tons to 100,000 metric tons (approximately 500,000 head of live cattle).

In spite of the disease outbreaks, Brazilian officials announced through World Press International on Feb. 28 that it expects to receive USDA clearance by Labor Day to begin shipping beef to the U.S. Once approval is received, Brazil hopes to be a powerhouse in the world beef market, says Agriculture Minister Francisco Turra. Besides shipping beef into the U.S., Brazil hopes that USDA approval will open doors into Asian markets, particularly Japan and South Korea. "Many countries, like Japan, are waiting for U.S. food safety approval, and there's a great deal of interest in Brazilian beef, which is hormone free," said Joao Heirelles, a former beef industry official, now serving as agriculture secretary for the State of Sao Paulo. He says Brazil plans to pour millions of dollars into an advertising targeted at consumers' health concerns. The campaign will use the English logo, "Brazilian Beef: A Taste of Nature." With January's devaluation of Brazilian currency, Brazilian beef is cheap.

McDonnell says there's no way Brazilian beef will have clearance by Labor Day in light of the animal health problems the country is experiencing. "Their products would have to be certified first, and there's a rule making process with a comment period involved. It could be two years before Brazil receives USDA clearance."

With the European continent fighting BSE (mad cow disease), news that the fatal disease which affects humans has recently been found in livestock in Germany, France, Italy, and Spain has caused international companies like McDonald's and ConAgra to suddenly ask suppliers to sign "letters of compliance." The documents require those who slaughter and sell the companies meat to guarantee the animals have not been feed meat and bone meal (MBM), which is one way animals can be infected with BSE.

McDonnell says the move is transparent at best. "I have no idea how these companies will apply this requirement on imported cattle and meat," he says. "Considering the transshipment and co-mingling of imported product that comes into the U.S.

from foreign countries, the only viable solution is for U.S. beef producers and consumers to demand that Congress take immediate action on meaningful country-of-origin labeling and import control mechanisms. American beef producers are at terrible risk. It's time to insist that their interests are put first. There's no time to waste in protection of our domestic beef supply and the American rancher."

USDA Toll-Free Foot And Mouth Disease Call Line

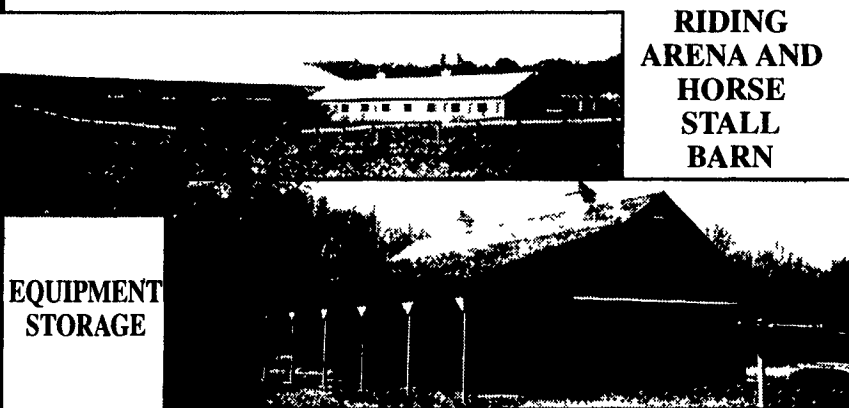

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA has established a toll-free telephone center to respond to questions from the public, industry, and media regarding USDA's response to the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in Europe. The toll-free number is (800) 601-9327. International callers can reach the center by dialing 01-301-734-9257.

The phone center is staffed by veterinarians and import/export experts from USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service who can explain the restrictions and regulations.

Maryland Dairy Industry Urges Constant Monitoring For FMD

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Maryland Dairy Industry Association (MDIA) is urging government and business leaders to take all necessary precautions to guard against the spread of highly contagious Foot-and-Mouth disease (FMD) onto American soil.

This includes farmers, processors, and food distributors, according to association leaders. Widespread outbreaks of the disease have been reported among livestock in Europe, resulting in millions of dollars of losses to agricultural producers.

MDIA represents Maryland's 800 dairy producers, as well as the suppliers that support them. It cautions that recent developments overseas are requiring immediate attention for all those involved with U.S. agriculture.

Recurrence of Foot-and-Mouth disease, last seen in Europe over 30 years ago, and not present in the U.S. since 1929, has cost livestock and dairy producers billions of dollars throughout the United Kingdom (England, Scotland, and Wales), as well as farmers in Germany and France.

Foot-and-Mouth disease is the most highly infectious animal disease known. It is caused by a virus that affects cattle, swine, goats, and other cloven-hooved animals. FMD is usually not fatal, but does lead to drastic reductions in milk yield and deteriorating physical conditions of the affected animals. According to Maryland Cooperative Extension, increased international travel and trade could heighten the transfer of FMD to livestock and processed foods in North America.

"Top-notch veterinary oversight and strict adherence to sanitary practices have kept FMD away from our shores," said MDIA President Myron Wilhide of Detour, Md. "But the reemergence of this contagious and costly disease in Europe reminds us never to let our guard down. In the months ahead, the U.S. must redouble its monitoring efforts at all points of entry — land and harbor — port terminals as well as airports — to ensure that food shipments, cargo, and persons entering this country are free from any type of animal-borne virus. These mitigation procedures will help ensure the continued safety and quality of U.S. agricultural products for domestic and international consumers."

On March 13, the USDA proposed several measures to combat the spread of FMD. Among those are a temporary ban on the importation of animals from the European Union, information hotlines and public service announcements to increase public awareness of FMD, and heightened alerts for federal and state inspectors at all U.S. points-of-entry as well as inspection sites abroad.

For additional information on these measures, contact USDA's communication's office at (202) 720-4623 or check their Website at www.usda.gov. USDA also has a toll-free FMD call line at (800) 601-9327. For information on MDIA's actions regarding this issue, contact its executive office in Washington, D.C. at (202) 293-0476.

World Pork Expo In Des Moines

DES MOINES, Iowa — World

Pork Expo, the world's largest pork-specific event, will be June 7-9 at the Iowa State Fairgrounds in Des Moines. The 3-day event is one of the largest annual agricultural shows in the United States, with an economic impact of $6 to $8 million on the local economy.

"Never before has access to information and new methods been as critical for America's pork producers," said Ernie Barnes, World Pork Expo manager. Advance tickets for WPX are available at a discounted rate. For more information about events and ordering tickets, find pork's website on the Internet at www.porkboard.org. World Pork Expo is a presentation for America's pork producers. Expo events are sponsored by the National Pork Board.

OSU Vet: Be On Toes Against Foot-And-Mouth Disease

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Europe's outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease may be an ocean away, but Ohio and Indiana livestock producers should still take precautions to keep the disease at bay, said veterinary and livestock specialists at Ohio State and Purdue universities.

"Foot-and-mouth disease is a highly contagious viral disease," said Gary Bowman, Ohio State veterinary preventative medicine specialist.

"Producers should employ all good biosecurity techniques, and restrict farm visits, especially from anyone who's recently been overseas.

"They should also know the health status of the animals they purchase, then isolate and observe them closely for 30 days."

Symptoms are lesions also known as "vesicles," or blisters around animals' mouths, lips and feet. Infected animals salivate profusely. The disease is usually not fatal, but it severely weakens livestock, which greatly reduces their production ability.

Swine, sheep, cattle and goats are all susceptible to illness from foot-and-mouth. Horses can carry the disease, but do not get sick.

Foot-and-mouth disease doesn't affect human health but people can carry the virus in their upper respiratory tracts and spread it to cloven-hoofed animals, Bowman said.

Farm visitors should thoroughly shower and change into a different set of clothes brought from a location known to be unaffected by the disease — preferably the farm itself, said OSU Cooperative Extension Service swine specialist Steve Moeller.

"That includes a change of shoes, too," he said.

Among production animals, swine produce the most airborne virus, and cattle are the most susceptible to infection from the airborne route, Bowman said. The virus can survive for months on a premises, for 10-12 weeks on clothing or in feed, and up to one month on hair.

The most commonly used disinfectants are not effective against the virus.

"The disease is so contagious, it can go airborne and still be viable after drifting 40 or more miles," Bowman said. "That's why they're so concerned about it spreading from Britain to Ireland or to the mainland."

In addition, many cured and dried meats carry the virus and can be sources of infection, Bowman said. Uncooked sausages from affected countries can conceivably carry the virus, he said.

There is a lot of concern that the virus could be carried internationally in the food served aboard airliners. Waste food from airports requires special handling to protect a country's livestock population.

In Britain, the outbreak was traced to untreated "swill," or garbage, containing contaminated meat ingredients. Feeding garbage to livestock is a rare practice in America, Bowman said. Generally, livestock rations are based on grain, grain byproducts or forages.

Garbage fed to livestock must be cooked to kill harmful viruses, bacteria and parasites.

Most livestock producers in Ohio and Indiana are conscientious about biosecurity issues, Moeller said. Farmers tend to follow precautions with any visitor to their farms, he said.

"The situation on today's farms is very business-oriented," Moeller said. "Modern-day pork production practices place a high priority on the health status of the pigs. The problem is, one small breach of security can result in catastrophic losses. So producers of all sizes must become aware of the situation."

Only the continents of North America, Australia and Antarctica are considered to be free of foot-and-mouth disease. The last reported outbreak in the United States was in 1929.

"We have a stamping out policy in our country regarding foot-and-mouth," said Simon Kenyon, Purdue Cooperative Extension Service veterinarian. "As soon as an animal is diagnosed with foot-and-mouth it is slaughtered, along with any contact animals. Great Britain has a stamping out policy, as well."

Livestock owners who suspect animals may have foot-and-mouth or any other disease they have not seen before should report to a local veterinarian, Kenyon said.

In the U.S., a rapid test is conducted to diagnose foot-and-mouth, Kenyon said. A sample is taken on the farm and then air freighted to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS).

After APHIS receives the sample, it takes two to three hours to confirm and detect the strain.

Producers Must Take FMD Concerns Seriously

Dr. Dave Griswold
Extension Veterinarian
Penn State

Let's start by saying that, as far as anyone knows, foot-and-mouth disease (FMD) is not, I repeat, not in the U.S. But, if it does come, you can bet it won't be waving any banners or sounding trumpets to announce its arrival.

Instead, the microscopic virus will ride on someone's coat or in their nasal passages to be released hours later during exhalation or a sneeze.

Or maybe it will in some infected meat or animal product that has been smuggled past customs by some thoughtless tourist or not so thoughtless person bent on hurting our agriculture.

The point is not exactly how it would get in as much as it is that we wouldn't know it had gotten here until the first infected animal was seen. By then, the genie would be out of the bottle and our livestock industry would be in grave danger.

How possible is this scenario? Many people think it is very possible and, in fact, very likely because of our modern transportation systems and the ability of the FMD virus to remain viable outside a living animal for relatively long periods of time.

The impact foot-and-mouth disease could have on our livestock industry is difficult to estimate because it would depend on how quickly it was recognized, how soon the infected animals were quarantined and eliminated, and how many other herds or flocks had been exposed to the infected animal(s) before anyone knew they were infected. Best-case scenario would be that virus infects one herd (flock), it is detected right away, the herd (flock) is quarantined and eliminated before any milk, animals or people leave the farm to spread the virus. The worst-case scenario is that those infected animals are sent through a livestock market and their owner and his employees carry the virus around the community.

The infected animals are bought and go to other farms in other states and this process is repeated several times until the virus has spread from one coast to the other and everywhere in between.

What are the chances of something like the worst-case scenario occurring?

If we look at Great Britain, we have to admit that it is definitely within the realm of possibility. We also have to remember that foot-and-mouth disease is one of the most contagious diseases known to man. It can be spread in aerosols (infected droplets of moisture from the respiratory tract) for 40 to 50 miles by the wind. In our livestock species, a high percentage of animals that are exposed will become ill. It could be a nightmare of unimaginable proportions.

So where does that leave us? Well, we don't have much control over most of the comings and goings of the world's people and products; we have to trust USDA and the customs service for that. But we do have control over the comings and goings on our own farms and to some extent in our communities.

There has not been a time in recent memory when individual farm biosecurity has been more important than it is now. We veterinarians, as a group, have preached biosecurity as a way of keeping diseases such as BVD, Salmonella, leucosis, and Johne's disease out of our herds, but not many people have shown much interest. Unfortunately, it often takes an expensive lesson like an outbreak of shipping fever or BVD on a farm to make people realize that they really could have prevented the problem with a few simple management changes directed toward keeping diseases out.

With foot-and-mouth disease, for which there is no prevention or cure, our only change of preserving individual herds or flocks is biosecurity.

Infection means mandatory destruction of the entire herd with no exceptions — you either keep it from getting into the herd or you lose everything. Sometimes even biosecurity is not enough, since the virus can be carried by the wind, but good solid biosecurity measures can give us the best possible chance of protecting our livestock from infection.

Simply put, biosecurity is a system of management practices designed to prevent introduction of new diseases onto a farm or to control the spread of a disease already there. It consists of determining the disease status of animals before purchase, quarantine of newly arrived animals, controlling who and what is allowed onto the farm, controlling where deliveries are made, segregating different groups of animals, pest control, and many other things which impact the opportunity for disease organisms to enter and move around the premises. Most biosecurity measures are common sense and cost little, if anything, to implement.

Talk to your veterinarian or county extension agent today about practical steps you can take to improve the biosecurity on your farm now.

The other important factor is the ability to identify the signs of FMD, and then do something about it quickly. Time is critical in controlling this disease. Should the first case occur on your farm and it was ignored for several days you could, through your normal travels, spread it to neighbors and friends some distance away. The feed truck could carry it to several counties as could the milk truck and any service people who happened to visit the farm. If by bad luck you also attended a local livestock auction, you could be responsible for spreading it over a multistate area. If you think this is far-fetched, start reading about what has happened in England.

I think the bottom line at this point is this: Be glad we don't have it, but manage your farm as if we did. If you see an animal with blisters or ulcers around its mouth, nose or feet, especially if there is lameness or excessive salivation involved, call your local or state veterinarian immediately. It is much better to call in a false alarm than to ignore the real thing.

There are many who think it will come. If it does, the first case can just as easily be in Pennsylvania as anywhere else.

We need to be very vigilant and we need to be very careful about who and what comes to our farms. Those of us who take appropriate precautions now will be in the best position to survive if FMD strikes.

If we are successful in keeping FMD out of the U.S., we can breathe a huge sigh of relief and uncross all our fingers and toes. The biosecurity measures we have implemented will have done us no harm and have actually improved our chances of keeping other diseases out of our herds in the meantime. There is no reason to lose sleep because of this threat. No one can say what the outcome will be, and worry will accomplish nothing. Instead, take action that will maximize the possibility of keeping the virus away from your livestock.

USDA Announces Start Of Crop Disaster Payments

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman announced that payments of more than $1.1 billion will begin under USDA's Crop Disaster Program.

So far, about 450,000 applications from 160,000 farmers have been approved, and more are expected. Final payments and statewide totals will be announced when all payments are made.

"American farmers are still feeling the pressure of low prices, and, in many cases, the effects of natural disasters," said Veneman. "These payments will assist farmers in this difficult time."

Sign-up for the CDP began on Jan. 18. Farmers should contact their local USDA Service Center or Farm Service Agency county office to file an application.

To be eligible, farmers must have suffered at least 35 percent loss to one or more of their 2000-year crops because of natural disasters. Eligible farmers will receive payment soon after approval of their application. The deadline to file an application will be announced later.

The Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act of 2001, provided funds for the CDP. Last year, USDA issued more than $1.2 billion in crop disaster payments.

For information on this and other USDA programs, contact your local USDA Service Center or the FSA local office, usually listed in telephone directories under "U.S. Government, Department of Agriculture" or on the Internet at www.usda.gov.

USDA Provides Option To County Apple Producers

YORK (York Co.) — County Apple Producers have until April 13 to apply for coverage under the Apple Market Loss Assistance Payment Program.

This program provides the nation's apple growers with economic assistance for market losses because of low prices.

Eligible York County producers are those who produced and harvested apples during the 1998 or 1999 crop year and are in compliance with highly erodible land conservation and wetland conservation rules. Congress appropriated $100 million for this program with the final payment rate determined by the number of applicants nationwide.

The maximum production eligible for payment is 1.6 million pounds or 38,095 bushels. County apple producers interested in this program may submit an application by mail, telephone, fax or in person at the York County FSA office in York, (717) 755-2966, ext. 2.

Sheep, Fiber Farm Tour April 28-29

ARGYLE, N.Y. — The ninth annual Washington County, N.Y. Sheep and Fiber Farm Tour is scheduled Saturday and Sunday, April 28-29, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day.

A free, drive-it-yourself event includes 10 farms. Barn visits, demonstrations, and discussions or scheduled workshops are prepared. Items for sale include fiber from the farms' animals, breeding stock, roving, yarn or articles of clothing, and cuts of lamb.

For a flier with a map and di-

Cheese-Making Business Workshop

MERCERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Jonathan White, an expert cheese-maker from New York's Hudson River Valley, will conduct a one-day workshop for those interested in learning about making and selling farmstead cheeses at Cove Mt. Farm, Mercersburg, on Tuesday, April 10 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

White (founder of Egg Farm Dairy in Peekskill, N.Y.) specializes in the creation of naturally-ripened soft cheeses made the old-fashioned way. One of the only U.S. cheese-makers authorized to export cheeses to the European Union, White is skilled in the production of "artisanal" cheeses that have recently become much sought after by American cheese connoisseurs.

His perspectives on making and selling cheeses for a growing specialty market are unique and useful for those considering getting started in the cheese business.

While it's not possible to learn everything in one day, workshop participants will get a "crash-course" in making farmstead cheeses, with a hands-on cheese-making demo and information about general techniques.

White will also talk about the economic realities of the cheese business, and discuss with those in attendance various strategies for how to position yourself in what can be a very competitive market.

Cost for the one-day workshop is $35, including lunch. Space is limited, and participation will be limited to the first 25 individuals to register. For reservations, contact Bryan Petrucci at American Farmland Trust at (815) 753-9351 before Friday, April 6.

World Simmental Federation Honors Given

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Robert Haralson of Atkins, Ark., and Kay Klompier of Amsterdam, Mont., have been awarded the prestigious World Simmental Federation (WSF) Golden Book Awards. Announcement of the awards was made during the Chairman's Reception at the American Simmental Association (ASA) 33rd Annual Meeting in Denver.

The highest recognition given by the WSF, the Golden Book Award recognizes those individuals that have made noteworthy contributions to the Simmental breed of cattle.

A powerful force in the Simmental business for over 20 years, Robert Haralson and his wife, Karen, own and operate C&H Simmentals, 30 miles northwest of Little Rock, Ark. A Simmental producer, he served on the Board of Trustees for seven years, which included a one-year term as ASA Board Chairman, and as a World Simmental Federation delegate and officer.

Kay Klompier, a graduate of Montana State University, first worked for ASA as a student intern before accepting full-time employment. During her 13 years as a member of the processing staff of ASA, she worked diligently to serve the ASA membership in the area of parental verification.

Working closely with technicians at California State University-Davis, she established blood typing and DNA procedures, which greatly enhanced and validated the verification process. She also developed working relationships with countless ASA members who came to depend heavily upon her guidance and advice. Klompier and her husband, Dave, maintain a herd of Red Angus cattle and a large custom hay operation northwest of Bozeman, Mont. They have two daughters.

The 27 nation World Simmental Federation offers the Golden Book Award. Nominations are made and approved by the ASA Board of Trustees.

Hayes Announces Measures To Monitor For Foot And Mouth Disease

nounced measures to monitor for FMD in Pennsylvania, and offered tips to travelers to countries stricken by outbreaks of the disease.

"Although no cases of foot and mouth disease have been reported in the United States, everyone — farmers, agricultural producers, veterinarians, even those outside of agriculture — should be alert to the need to practice basic biosecurity in the face of this very virulent animal disease," Hayes said.

Secretary Hayes said FMD has been diagnosed in 34 countries during the past 18 months. The latest outbreaks have occurred in Great Britain, Northern Ireland, Argentina, and France. The only continents free, as of presstime, of FMD are North America, Australia, and Antarctica.

Enck noted precautions to prevent entry of the disease have quietly been in place and enforced for many years, and are constantly being evaluated and upgraded, especially in light of the highly publicized events in the United Kingdom.

"Despite the recent publicity, the threat is not new," Enck said. "The current emergency in Great Britain and Europe is one more chapter of a saga that those concerned with animal health have watched unfold over the past several years."

"A number of preventive measures have been in force prior to the emergency in the United Kingdom and European Union."

Enck said the FMD virus poses special challenges, requiring proper disinfection and biosecurity protocols.

"People who have worked around or been near infected animals can inadvertently carry and spread the virus via their equipment, cars, clothing, shoes or even, for a short time, in their nasal passages or throat," Enck said.

"Studies indicate the virus can drift up to 40 miles on the wind — another hurdle to confining an outbreak to a specific area."

"Signs include high fever and vesicles or blisters on the muzzle, inside of mouth, tongue, and feet. These blisters will rupture, leaving raw or ulcerated areas. Animals affected will frequently drool or show signs of lameness."

"Producers and veterinarians are urged to be alert for signs of the disease and report any suspicious cases to (717) 783-6677."

Measures in place at the Bureau of Animal Health and Diagnostic Services at the Department of Agriculture to monitor animal diseases such as FMD include:

- An e-mail notification system for accredited veterinarians and livestock/poultry industry members to exchange information.

- A statewide network of veterinarians (foreign animal disease diagnosticians) who have received special federal training in the recognition, diagnosis, and management of foreign animal diseases, and who can respond on short notice if a disease such as Foot and Mouth Disease is suspected.

- The Pennsylvania Animal Health Emergency Preparedness Council, a Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture initiative that represents livestock/poultry stakeholders in developing regulatory policies to manage disease emergencies. A regional meeting of counterparts from surrounding states is planned for June.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) also has instituted a number of preventive measures, such as a ban on animals and meat products from the United Kingdom and European Union, and heightened inspection in accordance with existing policies. The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is cooperating with its USDA counterparts in the investigation, inspection and enforcement of these federal restrictions on importation of animals and animal products.

The USDA's Regional Emergency Animal Disease Eradication Organization also has an updated response plan, which integrates state and USDA response to a foreign animal disease, that will likely be activated if FMD is discovered in the U.S.

Both the USDA and the state Agriculture Department have drafted guidance for travelers to FMD countries that, if followed, will minimize the risk of transporting the virus to the U.S.

Overseas travelers are advised to take the following precautions upon their return to the U.S.:

- Avoid contact with animals or areas where animals have been held for at least five days before returning to the U.S.

- Before returning to the U.S., launder or dry clean all clothing, jackets or coats.

- Those who have visited a farm, or come in contact with livestock during their international trip, should shower, shampoo and change into clean clothing. Wash or dry clean clothes — don't risk taking the virus home on contaminated clothing.

- Remove all dirt or organic material from shoes, luggage, personal items, etc. Thoroughly clean the items with disinfectant, such as bleach.

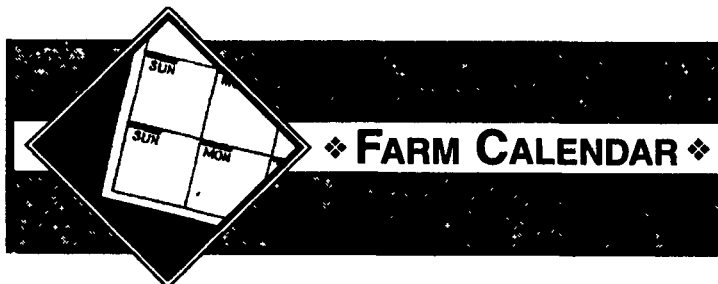

- Don't bring prohibited agricultural products home.

- Avoid contact with livestock or wildlife for at least five days after returning.

FMD, which has not been seen in the U.S. since 1929, is caused by a highly infectious virus that can cause death or disabling blisters and sores in and around the mouth, muzzle, teats, and feet of livestock with cloven or "split" hooves. Cattle, pigs, sheep, goats and deer are highly susceptible, and can exhibit clinical disease signs after an incubation period of only three to eight days. To stop the spread, affected or exposed animals must be slaughtered, then burned or buried. Premises and equipment must be disinfected to prevent the spread of FMD.

FMD could cause devastating economic damage in the U.S. An outbreak would cost millions of dollars to fight, in addition to the thousands of animals that would likely be destroyed. Livestock markets would be closed. Normal flow of animal products would be disrupted. Transportation of animals would be restricted. Exports of beef and pork would be embargoed. Population control might have to be established as a biosecurity measure if there is an outbreak. In the end, no one — producer, consumer or taxpayer — would be unaffected.

For more information on FMD, visit the Department of Agriculture Homepage through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or directly at www.pda.state.pa.us.

Milk consumption with its high calcium level offers a healthy alternative for the youth market. In fact, the presence of CLAs in milk also offers a strong anticarcinogenic value and the milk solids might actually combat the conditions causing diabetes.

The problem is older kids aren't drinking much milk. Dairy industry officials I spoke with offered many reasons why, most centering on the deep pockets of the cola industry and the relatively high cost of milk. Milk, a highly perishable product, is generally not available in vending machines. And, when it is, the industry cannot offer the kickbacks to schools, which sometime approach $70,000 a year per school.

Aggressive marketing is not the hallmark of the dairy industry. Officials I spoke with at various dairy associations indicated a basic conservative approach to promotion. "Got milk" and the milk moustache is about as cutting edge as the industry wants to get.

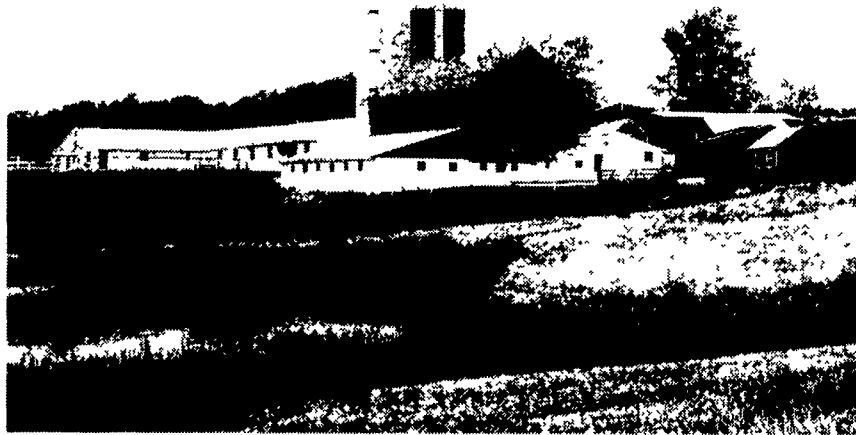

Dairy Of Distinction Highlights Well-Kept Dairies

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – Pennsylvania dairy farms are invited to apply for this year's Dairy of Distinction Award from the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program. Applications must be submitted by April 15.

The award is based on the idea that attractive farmsteads enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales and public support for the industry. Dairies receiving the highest scores in each of 10 Pennsylvania districts will be awarded an 18- by 24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to display in front of their farm.

"This program is run by volunteers and recognizes the hard work and dedication of dairy producers who promote a positive image for the dairy industry," said Mike O'Connor, secretary of the Pennsylvania Dairy of Distinction program and professor of dairy science extension in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

Roadside judging will take place in May. Judges will look at factors that can be controlled by the farmer, such as clean and attractively finished buildings; neat landscaping, ditches, roads, and lanes; and well-maintained fences. They also will take into account other aspects of the farm, such as cleanliness of animals, the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management.

Winning farms will be notified in late June. Because this is a yearly award, previous winners are reevaluated each year to see if they are still maintaining excellent standards.

Since 1987, Pennsylvania's Dairy of Distinction Program has recognized more than 750 dairy farms. The Pennsylvania program is part of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, which also includes New York, New Jersey, and Vermont. Dairies in these states can contact the program secretary in their state for applications.

How Is Your Farm Scored?

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance, and other factors, which can be controlled by the farmer. Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging. All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane). Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block.

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy producers or dairy farming. Farmers who apply for awards agree that, if selected, they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition.

How The Judging Works

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May. Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis. Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign. The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer. All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent of their Dairy of Distinction score card. Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

Rules

- The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program Committee (NEDFBP).
- The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer. NEDFBP suggests that a wood post 4"x4"x12' or iron pipe 2"x12' be used. Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground. Top of the bracket should be lower than six inches from the top of the post. In addition, NEDFBP suggests that the sign be mounted in a frame to provide additional stability.
- The sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside. An attractive post and bracket, or other frame shall be used to display the sign. No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign. The sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage.
- Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign.
- Replacement of damaged signs shall be at the discretion of the committee.
- No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expenses.
- The judges' decision will be final.
- Judging will take place between May 1 and May 31.
- Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1 and April 30. If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1 and May 31 so they have the opportunity to keep the sign.
- Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction Committee.

Dairy of Distinction 2001 Pennsylvania Application

PURPOSE OF PROGRAM

Attractive dairy farms give the consumer greater confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales which encourages public support for the dairy industry. The award gives recognition to the dairy farmer for maintaining a well-kept farmstead.

ELIGIBILITY

All Northeast dairy farms producing milk for sale are invited to submit an application for the award. Dairies receiving the 10 highest scores in each of the 21 districts will receive an 18"x24" Dairy of Distinction sign to be displayed in front of their farm.

My own pet peeve as a vegetable grower is that little of what I or my regional fellow farmers produce ends up in the school cafeteria. Kids are fed a diet resembling the worst of what America can offer growing children. Deep fried nuggets, pizza, hamburgers, etc., resemble what they get at the fast food outlets. It is a rare cafeteria that offers attractive fresh salads and fruits from regional farmers and greenhouses. We're lucky if the wilted iceberg lettuce and pale pink tomatoes come from California, rather than from a country 3,000 miles away.

But regarding the dairy issue, part of the past problem could have been the complacent attitude of the processors. Three processors control 1/3 of all the milk distribution in the country. And although individual dairy farmers benefit from the premium obtained from liquid milk sales, processors are generally happy with the 60 percent figure that comes from commercial sales to the cheese, ice cream, and yogurt industries. To dairy farmers, whose livelihood and profit margin is counted in pennies per hundred weight, the preference is definitely in liquid sales.

But even the large processors are having problems. Dean Foods, once the country's number one bottler, is having financial difficulties and might be absorbed by industry leader Suiza or even the smaller Italian based Parmalat. The problem, many analysts think, is caused by weaker dairy sales. But some believe part of the problem could also be Dean's milk chug with its high cost but low returns (according to Dairy Profit Weekly, March 19, 2001). And the chug is part of the industry's hope at recapturing the youth market.

My original thought was that the dairy industry intentionally let the youth market slide away. Big bucks from the colas just overly intimidated dairy promoters (with a budget of $350 million a year!). But now my thinking is that a lack of vision coupled with a conservative promotional approach lost students to a more aggressive and even predatory market game on the part of the colas. "We were asleep at the wheel" one dairy pro admitted to me, referring to the 20 years the dairies allowed the colas to capture the youth market.

But now there's an opportunity! The colas are being attacked and criticized for being too successful at their own game. The North American chief executive of Coca-Cola has promised to ease up on their aggressive marketing. If he can reign in his franchises, who have been asked to cut back on their exclusive contract deals with public schools throughout the country, we might start to see some changes. That willingness to voluntarily back off could be an opportunity for savvy and imaginative segments of the dairy industry to move in and recapture part of the lost market.

Cattlemen Meet To Begin Beef Expo

The Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association honored several industry representatives with awards during the annual cattlemen's banquet Thursday evening. Award winners in attendance included, from left, Commercial Cow Calf Producer of the Year George Hempt of Hempt Farms, Mechanicsburg, Cumberland County, joined by herdsman Archie Madden. Seedstock Breeder of the Year was John and Jo Ann Hausner, Dover, York County. Bill and Nancy Campbell, Duncansville, Blair County, of Hoss's Steak and Sea House, were also present to receive the Industry Service Award. USDA Actions For Cattle Imported Prior To 1989 Firewall Ban

WASHINGTON, D.C. — There are news reports circulating which suggest that cattle in Texas, Minnesota, Illinois and Vermont are suspected of having BSE (Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy). These reports are incorrect and have the potential to lead to confusion and concern.

Some cattle were imported into the U.S. prior to the two major BSE-related import bans: the July 21, 1989, ban on importing animals from countries with BSE, and the December 12, 1997, ban on importing animals from all European countries.

USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) has conducted a trace-back effort to locate each of the 496 UK and Irish cattle that were imported into this country between January 1, 1981, and July 1989. In July 1989, the U.S. prohibited the importation of ruminants from countries affected with BSE.

These cattle were traced and quarantined. Currently, only 4 of these traced animals remain alive in the United States. These animals are in Vermont and are being carefully monitored by APHIS personnel on an ongoing basis. Efforts are being made to acquire these animals and depopulate them. Over the years APHIS has acquired and tested these imported animals from the UK.

No evidence of BSE has been found in any of the UK import animals tested. The Vermont animals are very old and clinical BSE symptoms typically show up in infected animals between three and five years of age.

In December 1997, the prohibition on imported ruminant animals was expanded to include the entirety of Europe due to risk factors associated with BSE. There were 41 head of cattle imported from other countries in Europe prior to the 1997 ban and these animals have been under quarantine for years.

Twenty-nine animals were imported legally into Texas between February 1996 and September 1997. Eight others went to Colorado, one to California, one to Illinois. At the same time, two head were imported from Belgium to Minnesota.

Only 25 of these animals remain alive: 22 in Texas, one in Illinois and two in Minnesota. APHIS, in cooperation with the States and industry, continues to purchase these animals for diagnostic purposes. No evidence of BSE has been found in any of these imported animals.

These imported animals are NOT "suspected of having BSE." However, because these animals were imported from Europe, it is important that they be acquired, humanely euthanized and tested for BSE even though they are beyond the age at which symptoms of the disease likely would appear.

Farming Forecast

A soaking rain will once again overspread the region Sunday. The storm will bring rain into Monday, although there may be a changeover to snow Sunday night. This could unleash several inches of white stuff, especially in the higher elevations. After this storm moves away, we can anticipate milder weather for Tuesday and Wednesday with highs in the 50s.

Make It Cake

ITALIAN LOVE CAKE

1 package marble cake mix
2 pounds ricotta cheese
 $\frac{3}{4}$ cup sugar
4 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 small package instant chocolate pudding
1 cup milk
8-ounces whipped cream topping

Cake:

Prepare cake mix as directed on package and pour into greased 11x13-inch glass baking dish.

Mix together ricotta cheese, sugar, eggs, and vanilla, and beat until smooth. Pour on top of cake mix and bake at 350 degrees for 60 minutes.

Topping:

After cake has cooked and is cooling, prepare the topping as follows: Mix pudding with one cup milk. Fold in all the whipped topping. Spread on cooled cake.

Refrigerate cake six hours before serving. Serves 20-25.

This recipe was given to me about 15 years ago. Several of my friends enjoy using this recipe for family gatherings and parties since it goes a long way. It is a moist, delicious cake.

BETTY'S VANILLA COOKIE CAKE

$\frac{1}{2}$ pound butter
2 cups sugar
6 eggs
12-ounce package vanilla wafer cookies, crushed coarsely
7-ounce package coconut flakes
1 cup chopped walnuts, not crushed

Cream shortening and sugar until blended; add eggs one at a time, and beat after each addition. Add crushed cookie wafers alternately with $\frac{1}{2}$ of the milk. When mixture is blended well, add coconut flakes and nuts and blend together.

Pour into 10-inch tube pan, which has been greased and floured generously. Bake for 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ hours at 300 degrees. Leave pan upright when cooling and cool completely in pan before removing (2-3 hours). To remove from pan, loosen sides of cake from pan with a knife.

This recipe was given to me when my children were in grade school more than 35 years ago.

NANA BACORN'S MARBLE CAKE

Dark Batter

Cream together:
1 cup butter (no substitution)
1 cup brown sugar

Add:

4 egg yolks
Beat until fluffy. Sift together:
 $2\frac{1}{2}$ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 tablespoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves

Stir into batter alternately with $\frac{1}{2}$ cup milk.

Light Batter

Cream:

1 cup butter
1 cup sugar

Sift together:

$2\frac{1}{2}$ cups flour
1 tablespoon baking powder

Combine:

$\frac{1}{2}$ cup milk
1 teaspoon lemon extract
Add milk mixture and sifted ingredients alternately to batter. Beat until stiff:

4 egg whites
Fold egg whites into batter. Grease and flour 10-inch tube pan. Fill with alternate spoonfuls of the light and dark batters. Bake at 375 degrees for 60 minutes. Do not invert or remove cake until cold.

This has been a family favorite for three generations. If you mix the light batter first and put it into another pan, you can use the mixer bowl again without washing for the dark batter. Enjoy!

OATMEAL CAKE

Bring to a boil:

2 cups water
 $\frac{3}{4}$ cup butter

Add:

$1\frac{1}{2}$ cups quick oats, remove from stove, let stand 20 minutes. Add:

$1\frac{1}{2}$ cups brown sugar
 $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups granulated sugar

Mix well, add:

3 eggs
Mix again. Sift together the following ingredients and add to the egg mixture:

2 cups flour
 $1\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoons baking soda
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon cinnamon
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt

Place in a greased and floured 9x13-inch cake pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes or until done. Serve topped with whipped cream.

WHITE CHOCOLATE CAKE

$\frac{1}{4}$ pound white chocolate
1 cup butter
2 cups sugar
4 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash salt
 $2\frac{1}{2}$ cups cake flour, sifted with 1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup buttermilk
1 cup chopped pecans
1 cup coconut

Melt white chocolate over hot water; cream 1 cup butter, 2 cups sugar, and melted white chocolate. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add vanilla and salt, flour and buttermilk. Stir in nuts and coconut. Bake at 350 degrees in three 9-inch round greased pans for 30 minutes or in 10-inch tube pan for 75 minutes.

Frosting:

2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash salt

1 small can evaporated milk
Combine all frosting ingredients and let stand one hour. Stir occasionally. Cook to softball stage, beat until creamy. Spread on cooled cake. Serves 12-16.

Featured Recipe

Cakes are always in vogue. From plain to elaborate, cakes continue to appeal to all ages.

Our mailbox overflowed with favorite cake recipes from our readers. Here is one for Black Forest Cake from Patricia Ellington, Millers, Md.

She writes, "I guarantee lots of 'ooh's' and 'aah's' when you carry this to the table."

Any leftovers will keep well 3-4 days in refrigeration.

BLACK FOREST CAKE

Chocolate cake layer:

2 cups flour
2 cups sugar
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup cocoa
2 eggs
1 cup milk
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup oil
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup hot water

Sift dry ingredients into a bowl. In another bowl, whisk eggs, milk, and oil. Add to dry ingredients, mix well. Add hot water and heat. Pour into two 8-inch prepared round cake pans.

Bake at 350 degrees for 30-35 minutes. Cool 2-3 minutes. Remove from pans and cool completely. When cool, slice layers in half horizontally into four layers. Prepare cream filling.

Cream And Cherry Filling

3-ounces cream cheese
2 cups confectioners' sugar
16-ounces whipped cream topping
1 can cherry pie filling
Sliced almonds, if desired

Combine cream cheese and confectioners' sugar until smooth. Fold in whipped topping.

Assemble as follows: Place bottom half of one layer on cake plate. Slide strips of waxed paper under edge of cake. Spread layer with one cup cream mixture. Place top half of layer over cream. Spread with half the cherry pie filling. Place bottom half of second layer over cherries. Spread about one cup cream on top. Place remaining layer over cream. Insert 3-4 bamboo skewers down through all layers to prevent sliding. Leave skewers in until just before serving. Spread cream generously around sides. With spatula, place scallops of cream around the top edge forming a ridge to hold cherry filling in place. Fill center with remaining cherry filling. Garnish sides with sliced almonds if desired. Gently remove waxed paper strips. Refrigerate cake 4-6 hours before serving. Remove skewers.

STRAWBERRY SPONGE CAKE

12 eggs
2 cups sugar
1 orange (juice)
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 cups flour
3 10-ounce packages frozen strawberries, thawed

Separate eggs. In biggest bowl, beat egg yolks until thick and light in color. Add sugar and mix well. Add the juice from one orange and blend. Stir in flour, which has been sifted with baking powder (4 tablespoons at a time). Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites, pour in greased and floured 13-inch round pan. (Because many people do not have this size pan, contributor said it may be divided into two 10-inch pans). Bake in preheated oven at 350 degrees for one hour.

Topping:
3 half pints whipping cream
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Beat together topping ingredients until it reaches spreading consistency.

When cake has cooled and removed from pan, cut through middle to make two layers, spreading with one package of sliced strawberries with juice so that it soaks into cake. When this is done, spread whipped cream topping on top of strawberries, put layers together and spread remaining cream over all the cake (just like frosting a cake), top and sides. Place pieces of whole strawberries on top of cake in a design of your choice. (I usually dot the outside edge only). Variations for sponge cake:

Mix cake batter according to original recipe and bake. When cake has cooled, cut into three layers. Prepare a 5.9-ounce vanilla instant pudding and a 5.9-ounce chocolate instant pudding according to package directions. Spread puddings on respective layers. To the vanilla pudding, add 1 tablespoon rum flavoring or rum liqueur. Put together all layers and sprinkle top with confectioners' sugar. May add ½ cup chopped walnuts to chocolate pudding if desired.

You will end up with a three-layer cake with two fillings.

Peach variation:

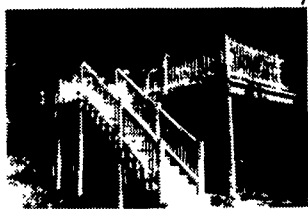

Use fresh or canned peaches instead of strawberries. With this one you still use the heavy whipping cream, but if you use fresh peaches, add sugar to suit your taste and a small amount of lemon juice.

This cake is really beautiful and impressive when completed. Everybody loves it. The cake is light, but so delicious, and it goes a long way. You can easily serve 25-30 guests. We use to have this for all birthdays and family gatherings since 1949 when we received this recipe from a New York City friend. It's a cake you never tire of serving or eating!

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

She waddles down the center walkway of the dairy barn, belly swaying from side to side.

Periodically, our milking sidekick plops herself down in an extra thick spot of sawdust, or snuggles up to Derra Dog curled up in another clump of the fluffy bedding.

Walking looks to be an effort these days for Mama Cat. The short legs under her calicoed-coat seem more out of proportion every day compared to the swollen belly they support. But she patrols the barn faithfully, keeping watch over strategic spots, where she pauses during her daily rounds on rodent-patrol.

Mama Cat is our resident, classic farm pet, a gentle cat with a loving disposition, always clean and well-groomed, but ferocious in her dedication to work. Thanks in no small part to her abilities — with assistance from some of her grown offspring — the inevitable rat and mouse populations, which live around barns, seem to be fairly-well under control here.

So we cherish Mama Cat and her fine-honed hunting skills, making sure she and her clan are fed and encouraged to "hang out" in our areas of feed and bedding storages. We trust she will teach her kittens the ways of the barn, ensuring the continuance of our prized pool of rodent-patrol talent.

At the box-stall end of the dairy barn, our first heifer calf in several weeks arrived, a welcome addition during a period of slow calvings and even more sparse deliveries of girl bovine babies. Before she was 2-hours-old, the tall, stocky heifer was enjoying breakfast, having already been licked clean and dry by her devoted, veteran mother.

Counter to this slow calving period, spring is "baby season" for nearly everything else on the farm. The few dozen Canadian geese hanging out on the pond will shortly have their number thinned, we suspect, as serious nesting begins and the dominant pair drives the rest away. A mallard duck couple is also already in residence, quietly and peacefully co-existing with the noisy, squabbly geese.

Other birds are busy around the farm. Robins hop across the slowly greening grass in every direction, welcomed back by Mother Nature providing lots of worms crawling up from rain-splashed ground. From dawn to the last, lengthening light, their cheery calls note that they, too, are setting up households and preparing for broods of babies in a few weeks.

Each year, we wonder what strange spot we'll find robins using for nest sites. While lots of them do the normal bird-thing, and build sturdy nests in the overhead sprawl of the old maple limbs, others have a more creative bent. We've found robin's nests in tractor motors, truck frames, even mufflers.

While you have to admire their originality, you have to wonder at the same time if robins have a particularly adventurous streak which causes some of them to live even more on "the edge" than homesteading 30-feet up in a tree.

Our pudgy squirrel visits the feeders frequently, so we can watch for signs that she, too, is raising a family here as in several recent years. She's certainly well-conditioned to feed them, stuffing herself daily on sunflower seeds. During one of last week's cold, rainy, blustery days, I glanced at the feeder on the maple tree, in which sunflower seeds are available from a plastic jug with a small "door" in the bottom, to see it knocked on its side in the frame, and a gray, fluffy tail waving outside the open pour top.

Not only was she stuffing her face, she had figured out how to do it and stay dry at the same time.

But, of all the babies expected on and around the farm this springtime, we are already ahead of the curve on the best kind of all. Grandchild number four, Sarah, couldn't wait until spring arrived, putting in her appearance on a sunny, last official day of winter.

For the Most Welcome Baby of the Season award, she wins here.

No contest.

Dairy Promotion Celebrates 25 Years In Juniata County

MIFFLINTOWN (Juniata Co.) — The Juniata County Dairy Promotion Committee marks its 25th anniversary of dairy promotion. A 25th anniversary Celebration Dairy Princess Pageant will take place on Sun., May 6, at 1:15 p.m. at the Walker Grange Hall, in the village of Mexico, Pa.

Committee is seeking dairy princess candidates. Young women must be 16 years of age by July 1 and no older than 24 years of age by Dec. 31. Contestants need not live on a farm, but must be connected to a farm or farm family in some way. Any child connected with farming is also eligible to serve as a dairy maid, dairy miss or dairy ambassador.

In observance of the 25th year, all former Juniata County dairy princesses are to be honored at the annual pageant on May 6. Entertainment will be provided by Joyful Harmony and former dairy princess Lou Ann Hoffman Davidson. Also present will be the Pennsylvania State Dairy Princess along with former Juniata County Dairy Promotion Committee members. A buffet of dairy desserts will be served followed the pageant.

During this 25th anniversary year, the Juniata County Dairy Promotion Committee is publishing a cookbook of dairy recipes submitted by current or retired Juniata County dairy farmers. The deadline to submit recipes for the book is June 1, and recipes can be mailed to Karen Shearer, RR1, Box 481, Port Royal, PA 17082 or e-mailed to her at jkarejust@pa.net. The cost of the book will be $12 for orders received by June 1.

For more information, contact Trudy Wagner at (717) 436-8184.

Nine More Farms To Be Preserved

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced that nine farms totaling 1,591 acres are approved for preservation — continuing Gov. Tom Ridge's commitment to protecting farmland and open space. Pennsylvania now has approved 60 farms totaling 6,982 acres in 2001.

"With the support of Gov. Ridge's 'Growing Greener' initiative, and through the hard work of state and county farmland-preservation board members, Pennsylvania continues its commitment to our strong, proud agricultural heritage," Secretary Hayes said. "Because of the dedication of our partners, Pennsylvania will continue its reach for greatness."

The following is a list of state easement purchases by county:

Beaver County
• Paul, Sharon, and Mary Czar, North Sewickley Township, 160 acres, $313,245;
• Edward and Nancy Tellish, Hanover Township, 174 acres, $357,986;
Chester County
• Robert and Claire Herr, East Nottingham Township, 51 acres, $183,276;
Cumberland County

• Frank Masland III, Frank Masland IV and David Masland, South Middle Township, 152 acres, $435,580;

Erie County
• Stephen and Debra Wright, North East Township, 66 acres, $139,995;

Mercer County
• Shearer Farm, Mill Creek Township, 468 acres, $381,147;

York County
• Harry and Shirley Chilcoat, East Hopewell Township, 209 acres, $271,412;

• Todd and Michelle Lowe, Fawn Township, 95 acres, $153,293; and

• John and Christine Marsteller Jr., East Hopewell, 216 acres, $301,418.

The Preservation Board also approved the preservation of three farms totaling 373 acres in Lancaster and Chester counties.

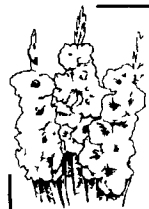

The Bureau of Farmland Preservation at the Department of Agriculture helps interested landowners to preserve their farms.

For more information, contact the Bureau of Farmland Preservation at (717) 783-3167, or access the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or directly at www.pda.state.pa.us.

Understanding BHA, BHT

COLUMBUS, Ohio — "BHA" and "BHT" are often listed as a food ingredient, but what exactly are they?

BHA and BHT are antioxidants, like vitamin C or beta carotene. But they're main job is to fight oxidation processes in foods, rather than in the body.

Oxidation might not sound so bad — the body needs oxygen to survive. But it's also what causes rust to form on metal. And it's what causes freshly cut fruits and vegetables to discolor, and fats to become rancid. Food scientists say the process of oxidation generally takes awhile to gain a foothold, but once it does, it tends to escalate rapidly.

That's why antioxidants like BHA and BHT are often used in foods — to try to prevent the oxidation from beginning in the first place.

As one writer in the trade journal "Food Product Design" put it, "These products slow down oxidation by disrupting the chemical chain reaction between oxygen and fat — it might be said that they will 'sacrifice' themselves to the oxygen' in order to save the food that they're protecting."

BHA (butylated hydroxyanisole) and BHT (butylated hydroxy-toluene) are considered "GRAS" by the Food and Drug Administration, or "Generally Recognized as Safe." But there are strict limitations to the amount that can be used in food.

In products where the preservatives are used to fight rancidity in fat, the amount of BHA or BHT cannot exceed 0.02 percent of the amount of fat in the product. That's equal to 200 parts per million.

The preservatives are also used in cereals and some other foods with very little fat. In those cases, the FDA has limited the amount to 50 parts per million of the total product.

In the 1980s, some public concern over BHA arose after a study suggested that extremely high levels of BHA could cause tumors in the forestomach of rats, mice and hamsters. However, the amount necessary for tumor formation was thousands of times higher than any human would ingest. And fears were also allayed because humans don't have forestomachs. Other studies soon showed that BHA could also be protective against cancer, acting like any other antioxidant would.

Mushrooms, The Versatile Vegetable

Mushrooms are readily available year round. Mushrooms are combined with other vegetables in many ways:

Beans and Peas: Boil beans five minutes in water; add peas and boil for another five minutes; add mushroom and cook five minutes more. Drain, add butter to taste.

Spinach and Green Onions: Cook mushrooms, spinach and green onions in a tightly covered saucepan. The water clinging to the leaves of the washed spinach is sufficient. Drain well and sprinkle with grated nutmeg and dot with butter or margarine.

Shredded Cabbage and Carrots: Add mushrooms, sliced celery and some chopped onions. Panfry in a skillet with one tablespoon of butter or margarine per cup of vegetables. Cook until tender, but still crisp.

Asparagus and Broccoli: Cook sliced mushrooms in butter or margarine and a little lemon juice. Pour over hot cooked asparagus or broccoli.

Beets: Simmer thinly sliced mushrooms in French salad dressing and pour over beets just before serving.

Nutty Stir Fry Bowl

3 cups cooked brown rice
1 teaspoon vegetable oil
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 cup sliced bell pepper
1 carrot, sliced
1 onion, chopped
½ cup mushrooms
1 cup broccoli florets
2 tablespoons chopped peanuts
2 tablespoons light soy sauce

Heat the oil in a large non-stick skillet over medium high heat. Saute the garlic until golden brown, then add peppers, carrots, and onions. Saute until crisp tender, then add mushrooms and broccoli. Cook briefly, then add the peanuts and soy sauce. Stir. Serve hot over rice. Serves 4.

Each 1½ cup serving: 233 calories, 5 grams fat, less than 1 gram saturated fat, 293 milligrams sodium, 41 grams carbohydrate, 5 grams fiber, 7 grams protein.

Pasta Primavera Salad

8 ounces penne pasta, dry
1 teaspoon olive or canola oil
1 teaspoon minced garlic
½ onion, chopped
1 cup sliced mushroom
2 ripe tomatoes, cored and diced
1 cup broccoli florets
½ cup vegetable or chicken broth, low sodium
3 cups raw spinach, wash leaves and pat dry
4 tablespoons flavored vinegar black pepper to taste
4 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Cook pasta according to package directions. Drain in colander.

Heat a large nonstick skillet over medium high heat. Add the olive oil and saute garlic and onion until golden brown, about three minutes. Add the mushrooms and saute two minutes. Add the broccoli and broth and bring to a boil.

Cook briefly, then add the rest of the ingredients, including the pasta. Serve immediately or chill for later use.

Serves 4. Each 1½ cup serving: 284 calories, 4.5 grams fat, 1 gram saturated fat, 5 milligrams cholesterol, 155 milligrams sodium, 49 grams carbohydrate, 5.5 grams fiber, 12 grams protein.

Bowlan Traded Farm Life For Big-City Excitement But Discovered She Was Really A Farmer At Heart

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — "When I graduated from high school, the last thing I wanted to do was farm," Marion Bowlan said. "Growing up on the farm, it seemed like all we ever did was work."

So Bowlan packed her bags and headed off to college to earn a degree in psychology. Then it was off to Philadelphia, where she met her husband-to-be Frederic, who was also a social worker in the city.

In a few years, the excitement of city life faded. Bowlan remembered the smell of spring on the farm, the feel of the soil when walking barefoot in the garden, and the thrill of seeing plants sprouting in neatly planted rows.

"My family was shocked when I told them I wanted to return to the family farm," Bowlan said.

By that time, two of Bowlan's six siblings had taken a stint on the family farm, and no one was interested in buying it.

Her city-bred husband was skeptical. But he agreed to buy the farm with the understanding that he would continue with his career, and Bowlan would do the farming. The plan enabled Bowlan to be a stay-at-home mom for the couple's two preschoolers, Matt and Jen.

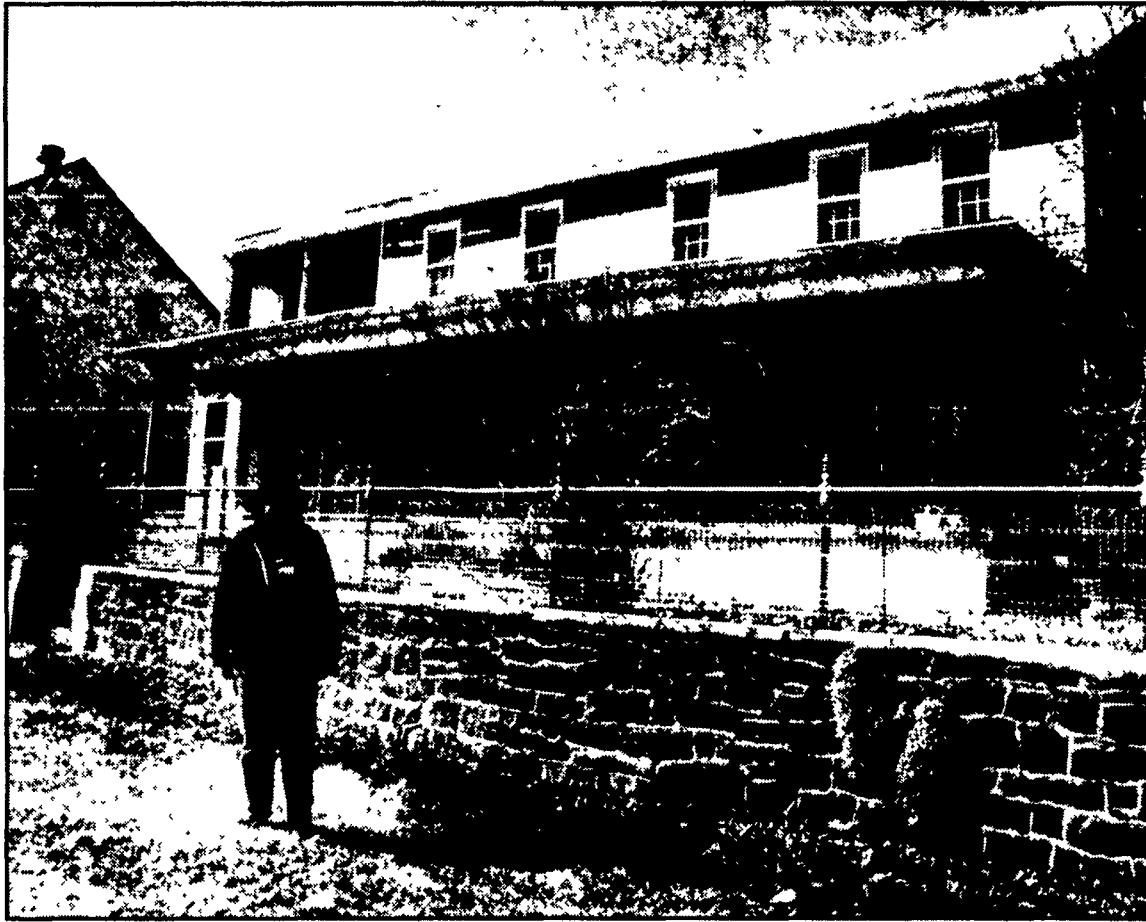

For a few years, the Bowlans rented out most of the acreage to a neighboring farmer. Bowlan raised five acres of organically grown food to market locally. At that time, local organic markets were slow. After struggling through a few years of drought, the Bowlans faced another hurdle. Job cutbacks resulted in Bowlan's husband losing his job.

Bowlan went to work full time for the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts. Although her husband got another job, the couple decided to start crop farming 57 acres themselves.

Crop farming gradually phased out as the family's interest in rotational grazing grew.

"Now the whole farm is in grass, and our only regret is that we didn't do it sooner," Bowlan said.

Initially, the Bowlans tried rotational grazing because they didn't have money to invest in equipment. They started with spider fencing and switched to high tensile perimeter fencing.

Marion Bowlan shocked her parents, siblings, and even herself when she decided to give up her career in social work and return to the family farm in Manheim. Bowlan, her husband, and two children have adapted intensive grazing methods that fit in better with their busy lifestyle than traditional farming. Bowlan is also the executive director for Pennsylvania Farm Link, which helps create farming opportunities for the younger generation.

About 50 head of cattle graze year-round. The herd is healthy, unlike the herd that was housed in a drafty barn and prone to pneumonia.

"We don't need to spend money hauling manure," Bowlan said of the reduced workload.

Grazing did cause problems during the drought. As protection against another drought, the Bowlans made a decision to rent additional acreage for hay.

Most of the beef is sold directly to customers.

Bowlan said although they haven't used chemicals on the farm for seven years, and the cattle have not been injected with hormones or antibodies since they began grazing, she isn't intolerant of conventional farming. "As a money-making venture, I can understand why farmers use chemicals," she said. She said that her decision to use intensive grazing practices appalled her father, who believed conventional farming methods were better.

"But intensive grazing is what works best for our lifestyle," Bowlan said.

"We don't own a skid loader they make an effort to keep other interests so their children don't think farming is all work. Two years ago, the family took a two-week trip to Alaska.

Bowlan continues her art interest, enjoys home decorating, and maintains extensive flower beds around the house and barns.

Matt enjoys helping on the farm, and is in his first year of college working toward a degree in physical therapy. Jen is still in high school.

"We plan to sell our conservation easement, and would set up an arrangement if the children wanted the farm," she said. She believes the children should be 25-30 years of age before deciding whether or not they want to farm.

Bowlan has plenty of expertise in transitioning the family farm. She is executive director for Pennsylvania Farm Link since its inception. Farm Link is a non-profit organization dedicated to creating farming opportunities for the next generation.

It partners with other agricultural organizations to provide regional workshops and educational services. They offer lots of assistance to families to help make passing on the family farm a pleasant experience for all family members.

"Because my background is working with families, I prefer to address family issues," Bowlan said. "Unfortunately, farm families often don't want to address differences," which, she believes, need to be resolved for healthy family relationships.

"Families need to be proactive or things don't get done, and they will need to deal with the consequences," Bowlan said.

"My desire is to help farm families, who are the backbone of agriculture," she said.

For Bowlan, farming has come full circle.

Bowlan speaks not only as "the expert" when conducting Farm Link workshops but also from farming experiences.

“Because my background is working with families, I prefer to address family issues. Unfortunately, most farm families don’t want to address differences, which need to be resolved for healthy family relationships. Families need to be proactive or things don’t get done, and they will deal with the consequences.”

All Veal, All The Time At The New York Show

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Veal bacon and veal sausages are on the market, filling a niche for consumers on a quest for a healthy product that does not forego taste.

In a partnership with the New York Beef Industry Council (NYBIC) and the Wisconsin Veal Grower's Association (WVGA), Leon's Sausage Company, Marcho Farms, Inc., and Culinarite provided the solution for veal connoisseurs alike at the New York Restaurant and Foodservice Show.

The show is among the elite in foodservice industry events and is the premier event for restaurant and foodservice operators, located in the top veal consuming area. This year there were over 20,000 people in attendance and new veal products were a hit, pleasing the taste buds of thousands of show attendees.

This year marks the first time that the NYBIC partnered with the Wisconsin Veal Growers and the first year that the booth space was 20-feet long. A new display, displaying colorful veal photography captured the eye of passersby, prompting them to stop and learn about new innovations in veal.

Chef Sebastian Soares prepared Veal Sausage Brushchetta with Apples and Smoke Gouda, and Sage and Fried Onion.

This year's goals were to: demonstrate a variety of menu concepts using veal, capitalizing on veal's versatility using new products as an example, promote veal in an effort to increase demand for underutilized cuts, provide recipe information to restaurant and food service operators, and distribute educational materials for distributor training seminars and culinary schools.

Veal Sausage Brushchetta

- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 small onion, halved lengthwise and sliced thin
- ½ pound veal sausage or ground veal with smoke Gouda cheese and apples, cooked
- 4 ripe plum tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and diced
- 2 large garlic cloves, sliced (for topping)
- 2 large fresh sage leaves, minced
- 1 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
- 1 teaspoon coarse salt
- 1 garlic clove (for toasts)
- ¼ cup extra-virgin olive oil
- A pinch of ground allspice

For 16 toasts: A 24-inch loaf of crusty Italian or French bread.

To make toasts: Prepare grill or preheat broiler. With a serrated knife, cut bread crosswise into ½-inch thick slices. Grill slices on a rack set about 4-inches over glowing coals 1 to 1½ minutes on each side, or until golden brown and crisp outside, but still soft inside. Alternatively, slices may be broiled in batches under a broiler about 4-inches from heat 1 to 1½ minutes, or until golden. Rub toasts with garlic on one side and lightly brush same side with oil. Toasts may be made up to 1 week ahead and kept in an airtight container.

To make topping: After preparing the tomatoes, combine them in a bowl together with the olive oil, some of the sage, salt, and pepper and let sit in the refrigerator for 15 minutes. In a large skillet, heat vegetable oil over moderately high heat until hot, but not smoking. Add onion, saute until golden. Add veal sausage and garlic; continue to saute over moderately high heat until golden. Stir in remaining minced sage, pepper, salt, and allspice. Cook until done. Mix sausage with the tomatoes and put about two teaspoons of the mix on the oiled side of each toast and serve. Makes 16 Brushchetta.

Two To Compete For Pa. Jersey Queen Title

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — Two young ladies will compete for the title of Pennsylvania Jersey Queen at the Pennsylvania Jersey Convention to be held Friday, April 6, and Saturday, April 7, in this city.

The new queen will be crowned at the annual banquet and awards dinner Friday evening and will make her first royal appearance at the spring calf and heifer sale the following day.

Stephanie Donough, daughter of Timothy and Brenda Donough of Bainbridge, and Amy Kaucher, daughter of Bonnie Kaucher and Harold Leib of Mechanicsburg, are the contestants.

Stephanie has shown Jerseys for nine years and owns five animals. She is a member of the Northwest 4-H Dairy Club and has competed as a member of the Lancaster County dairy judging team. She is also a Lancaster County Dairy Ambassador and enjoys helping out around the farm where she specializes in heifer and calf care.

"I have been involved with the Jersey breed since I was 8-years-old, when I received my first Jersey calf as a 4-H project," said Donough. "I feel that my work with Jerseys has taught me responsibility at a young age, not to mention patience, pride, communication, leadership, the value of hard work and dedication."

Amy has had Jerseys for nine years and owns 18 animals. She is a Cumberland County Dairy Ambassador, a member of the County-Wide 4-H Dairy Club and the Cumberland Valley FFA Chapter. She had judged dairy cattle in FFA and has shown her Jerseys at numerous fairs and shows.

"I have been involved with Jersey cattle for the past eight years," said Amy. "I have kept records and scrapbooks on my Jerseys and by doing that, I have received many awards and learned a lot about keeping proficient records."

The new Jersey Queen will succeed the 2000 Jersey Queen, Joy McConnell, of Volant.

QUESTION — C. Faus wants to know how to make homemade rice cakes. She writes they are nice for wheat-free diets but expensive to buy.

ANSWER — Mary Brinton, Severn, Md., wanted a recipe for President Grant's rice pudding, which is reported to have been his favorite. Thanks to a reader who sent in the following recipe, which is served with lemon sauce.

Rice Pudding

1 tablespoon butter
3 cups hot cooked rice
4 eggs, separated
2 cups half-and-half
2 cups milk
½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon peel, grated
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
¼ teaspoon salt

Stir butter into rice; set aside. Beat egg yolks; add half and half, milk, sugar, lemon peel, vanilla, and salt. Add yolk mixture to rice. Beat 4 egg whites until stiff; fold into mixture. Pour into a buttered, 2-quart baking dish; set in pan of hot water. Bake one hour in a 350 degree oven or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serve with lemon sauce. Serves 8.

Lemon Sauce:

½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup boiling water
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon lemon peel, grated
3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice

Combine sugar, cornstarch, and salt; stir in water gradually. Cook, stirring constantly, about 5 minutes. Blend in remaining ingredients.

ANSWER — Joyce Grim, Bucks Co., writes that her church group makes candy twice a year. Often the chocolate turns white while drying, and she wanted to know what caused that problem. Thanks to Eleanor Heavener, Flintstone, Md., who writes that chocolate turns white when it is poured too warm or the room is too warm and it is taking too long to cool. Make sure the chocolate is slightly cool to the touch and work fast. If it cools too much, set in a pan of hot water for a few seconds. She would be happy to answer questions at (301) 478-2712.

ANSWER — Janet B. Vogt, Bloomsburg, wanted a recipe for dark rye bread with caraway seeds, not for a bread machine but "good old homemade by hand" bread. Thanks to a reader for sending a recipe.

Rye Bread

2 packages active dry yeast
½ cup warm water
¼ cup honey
3 cups rye flour
2 cups warm buttermilk or sour milk
4 tablespoons caraway seed
½ cup soy grits (optional)
2 teaspoons salt

¼ cup molasses

½ cup melted butter or oil

3 or more cups whole wheat flour

Mix yeast into warm water, add 1 teaspoon honey; set aside. Combine rye flour, milk, caraway seed, grits, salt, molasses, remaining honey and butter or oil. Add yeast mixture; beat until smooth. Add enough whole wheat flour to make a soft dough. Knead dough on a lightly floured board until smooth. Put dough in greased bowl; turn to grease the top. Cover and let dough rise in a warm place until doubled; punch down and let rest about 10 minutes. Divide dough in half. Shape loaves and put into 2 greased loaf pans; cover and let rise to rim. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven 35-45 minutes, until brown and firm all over. Remove from pans; cool on wire racks.

ANSWER — Karen Horning, Mohnton, wanted a recipe to make the basic baking mix like Bisquick. Thanks to Elizabeth Weaver-Kreider and Jennifer Kauffman for e-mailing recipes, and to others for sending recipes.

Basic Biscuit Mix

For 4 pounds of mix, sift together three times:

10 cups all-purpose flour
6 tablespoons baking powder
1½ tablespoon salt
1½ teaspoon cream of tartar
¼ cup sugar

Cut into dry mix until consistency of cornmeal:

2 cups vegetable shortening

Stir in:

2 cups dry milk powder

Store in covered container at room temperature. Can use interchangeably in recipes required Bisquick.

Substitutions: ⅓ of flour can be whole wheat. Can add 1 cup wheat germ. May replace 1½ cups all-purpose flour with soy flour. Dry milk is optional, but increases protein.

Easy Biscuit Mix

10 cups all-purpose flour or 6 cups all-purpose with 4 cups whole wheat flour
½ cup baking powder
¼ cup sugar
2 cups shortening
2 teaspoons salt

In bowl, stir together flour, baking powder, sugar, and salt. Cut in shortening until mixed thoroughly.

To make biscuits: Use 1 cup biscuit mix and ¼ cup milk. Makes 4; bake at 450 degrees for 8 minutes.

To make muffins: Use 1 cup biscuit mix, 1-3 tablespoons sugar, 1 egg, and ¼ cup milk. Makes 6. Bake at 400 degrees for 15-20 minutes.

To make pancakes: Use 1 cup biscuit mix, 1 beaten egg, and ¾ cup milk. Makes 6.

ANSWER — A Somerset reader wanted recipes for Catalina or French Salad Dressing. Thanks to Jennifer Kauffman for sending this recipe.

French Dressing

2 cups mayonnaise
¼ cup vinegar
3 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon mustard
1 cup ketchup
1 teaspoon garlic powder
Mix together thoroughly and serve.

Here's and entirely different recipe for French dressing from Elizabeth Weaver-Kreider.

French Dressing

Shake, beat, or whirl in blender:

1 tablespoon grated onion
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons vinegar
½ cup salad oil
½ cup ketchup
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon paprika
Keeps well stored in refrigerator.

Soy Milk From Dry Beans

Oriental Method: Several methods are used in the Orient for making soy milk. The following recipe is simple.

Soak dry soybeans in water for 12 hours at room temperature, changing the water frequently. Many prefer to soak the beans at least 24 hours. Grind the beans to a fine paste, in a food chopper with a fine knife, or, preferably,

Third Annual Pennsylvania Food Industry Conference Set

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre Co.) — Leaders of industry, government and academic research will discuss emerging opportunities in the state's food industry at the Third Annual Pennsylvania Food Industry Conference, to be held April 3 at the Eden Resort Inn and Conference Center in Lancaster.

"The food industry, consumers and academic experts will face new challenges in the next decade and beyond," says Bob Roberts, associate professor of food science and a conference co-chair.

"The conference will provide an opportunity to explore futuristic perspectives in the areas of food safety, sensory science, food irradiation and hydrocolloids. It's also a chance for representatives from the food industry, academia and government to address issues we all may face in the future."

The conference is intended for managers, directors and technical personnel involved in the food system, as well as educators and students in related fields and personnel involved in marketing, operations, sensory evaluation, product development and research.

John Floros, professor and head of Penn State's department of food science, will deliver the keynote address, "Food Science: Moving into the Future."

Floros has developed alternative processing methods using ozone and preservatives to reduce pathogens on fresh produce and juices, and has designed "active" packaging films with antimicrobial and oxygen-absorbing properties to improve food safety and shelf life.

Other co-chairs include Julie Emsing, chair-elect of the Keystone Institute of Food Technologists; Thomas Dimick, outreach coordinator in Penn State's food science department; and Judy Williams, president of Penn State's Food Industry Group.

Manfred Kroger, Penn State professor emeritus of food science, will discuss "Food Science: Past, Present and Future." Stephen Knabel, associate professor of food science at Penn State, will present "Food Safety: How Can We Work Together More Effectively?" Paul Bomba, senior manager of sensory and texture research and services for Hershey Foods Corporation, will cover "Sensory Science in the Food Industry: Past and Future."

"Recent and Future Developments in Food Irradiation" will be discussed by Catherine Cutter, Penn State assistant professor of food science.

Donald Thompson, professor of food science at Penn State, will present "Beyond Enzyme-Resistant Starch: Modulating Starch Digestion for Nutrition and Profit." A poster/exhibition session also will feature recent findings from faculty, graduate researchers and industry.

A registration fee of $95 per person covers conference materials, beverage breaks and the conference dinner.

Additional guest dinner tickets can be purchased for $30

In a stone mill, adding water to the mass during the grinding process in the amount of three times the bulk of beans. Boil this mass to foaming for one hour, and strain through cheesecloth.

Bag Method: Wash the dry beans and soak them overnight. In the morning, drain them and remove the loose skins. Grind the beans very fine, and then place them in a cheesecloth bag. Put the bag in a large bowl of lukewarm water, using 3 quarts water to each pound of dry beans. Work thoroughly with the hands for 5-10 minutes. Wring the bag of pulp until it is dry. Boil the milk over a low flame for 30 minutes, stirring constantly to prevent scorching. Add salt and a small amount of honey or sweetening. This milk will keep several days in refrigerator.

Quick Method: This method is less work and gives a good soy milk. Soak 1 cup dry beans overnight. Drain them and run through a food chopper, using a fine knife. Add six cups water to the ground beans and bring mixture to a boil. Simmer 15 minutes; strain through sieve or cheesecloth. Flavor the milk as desired. A liquefier may be used for grinding the beans. If a double boiler is used for cooking the liquid or ground beans, double the cooking time to 30 minutes.

Tofu, sometimes called bean curd or soy cheese, is made by allowing soy milk to sour and curdle. Several methods for making tofu or soy cheese exists.

Soy Cheese From Dry Soybeans

1 cup dry soybeans

4 cups water

Juice of 2 lemons

Soak the beans overnight, drain off the liquid, and wash beans thoroughly. Using 1/2 cup beans to 1 cup water, run through a liquefier for 2-3 minutes. Strain the mixture through a fine sieve. Save both liquid and pulp.

When all soaked beans have been liquefied, put all the pulp back in the liquefier with enough water to nearly cover. Liquefy this for about 2 minutes and strain it into the above liquid. This milk-like liquid is made into soy cheese as follows:

Bring the milk mixture to a rolling boil (a double boiler is good for this, as it sticks quick easily). Add the lemon juice, stirring only enough to mix thoroughly. Allow the mixture to stand in the heat until it is coagulated. This soy cheese may be used in any recipe calling for soy cheese or tofu.

This cheese may be used as a base for patties, loaves, or other entrees. If it is used in salads or other dishes where it will not be cooked, it should be boiled in water for 15-20 minutes before using.

The residue left when making soy cheese from the whole beans may be used in making bread and cookies, or in a loaf to be used as an entree.

Soy Cheese From Flour

1 cup full-fat flour

3 cups water

Juice of 2 lemons

Place the water in a saucepan and bring to a boil. Mix a cup of full fat soy flour to a paste with cold water. Beat it with an egg beater one minute and add to the boiling water in saucepan. Let cook about 5 minutes, add lemon juice, and set mixture aside to cool. Strain curds through a fine strainer or cheesecloth. This cheese can be used as a base for patties, loaves, and other entrees, or it may be pressure-cooked for one hour at 10 pounds pressure and served in salads.

Be Wary When Hunting Wild Mushrooms

COLUMBUS, Ohio — For many people, spring means it is time to head for the woods and hunt for mushrooms. But be careful of what you pick. Some poisonous mushrooms can look similar to edible varieties, said Lanny Rhodes, Ohio State University associate professor of plant pathology.

If people mistakenly eat a poisonous mushroom, they could become seriously ill, or even die, Rhodes said.

"You should always know what type of mushroom you are picking," he said. "Never eat anything if you're not absolutely sure what it is."

mushrooms in a variety of forms, colors and textures. Mushroom varieties grow from early spring through late fall, with most species appearing in the fall.

But when most people think of mushrooms, they think of the edible morel or sponge mushrooms, Rhode said. Morels have a white, gray or yellowish stem with a brown, black or yellow cap that is pitted or sponge-like with a pointed appearance.

A mushroom is the fruiting body of a fungus. The microscopic, threadlike fungi grow on dead organic matter such as leaves, wood, grass, thatch or dung, depending on the species. When the fungus has stored enough nutrients, and there is sufficient moisture, it grows a mushroom, which produces and releases spores.

Mushrooms are most common in woodlands or other areas with high levels of organic matter. They often help break down logs, leaves, stems and other organic debris. Many species are specific about their food source and will be found only under or near certain kinds of trees.

The potential danger of picking morel mushrooms for food is that poisonous false morel, or

Gyromitra, mushrooms look similar to morels, grow in the same places and during the same time of year, Rhodes said.

"Mushroom hunters should watch out for false morels, because they are poisonous and potentially deadly," he said.

The effect of eating poisonous false morels varies by the individual. Some people could eat them with little or no effect, while others could die, Rhodes said.

The most deadly Ohio mushrooms are the Amanitas, which typically appear in the late summer and fall. They are pure white with an egg-shaped cup at the base and a skirt-like ring on the stem just below the cap of the mushroom.

Symptoms of Amanita mushroom poisoning usually appear from six to 24 hours after eating and include abdominal pain, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea and other forms of gastric distress.

"The danger is that the symptoms then lapse for a while and people think they are safe," he said. "But then the symptoms come back, along with liver or kidney failure, convulsions, coma and sometimes death."

CABIN FEVER

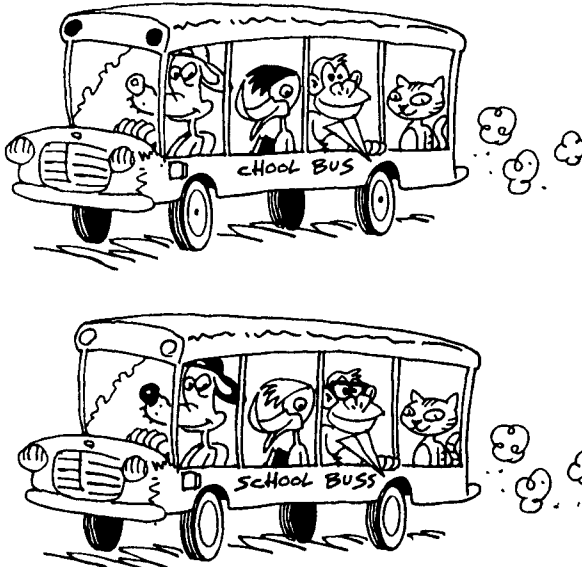

When the winter is coldest, and the days seem very short, how do you feel? If you're like a lot of people, you might have cabin fever. Cabin fever is what we call it when all you want to do is go outside and play, run, shout—basically, do anything but sit inside.

Unfortunately, when it's really, REALLY cold, you might have to stay inside anyway. Here are some ideas for things you can do on a cold, snowy, cabin fever-ish kind of day:

- Bake cookies (ask an adult for help).
- Have a parade with friends and toys.
- Pretend that you're in the jungle looking for animals.
- Have a party (ask an adult for help).
- Read a book.

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?

There are nine differences between the two buses. Find and circle them.

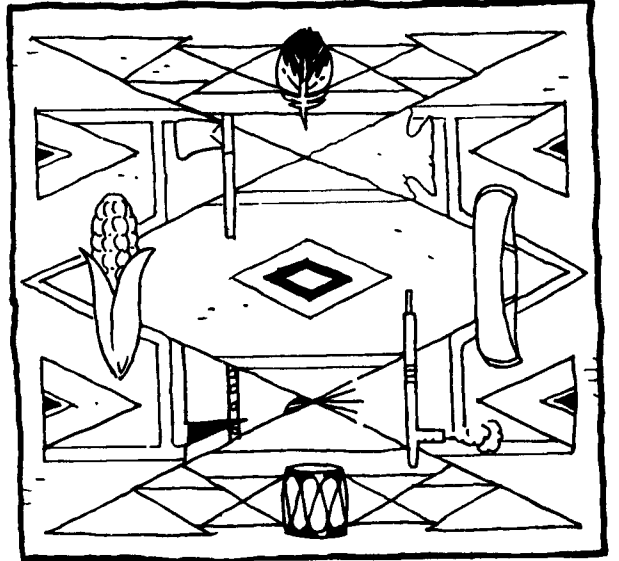

PARADE PUZZLE

In the New Year's Day parade this year, there was one majorette, one clown, one elephant, one ostrich, one princess, one dog, one cat, one mayor and a 10-person marching band. How many legs were walking down the street?

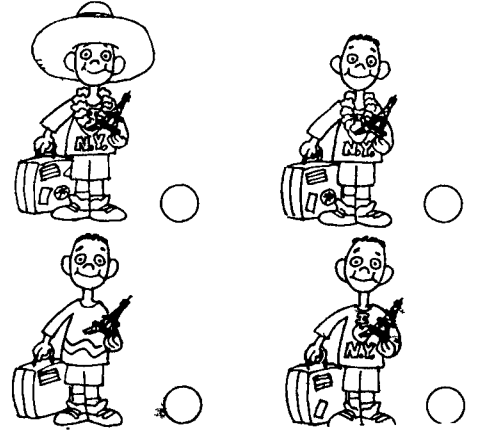

There are eight different things hidden in the rug pattern below. Can you find them?

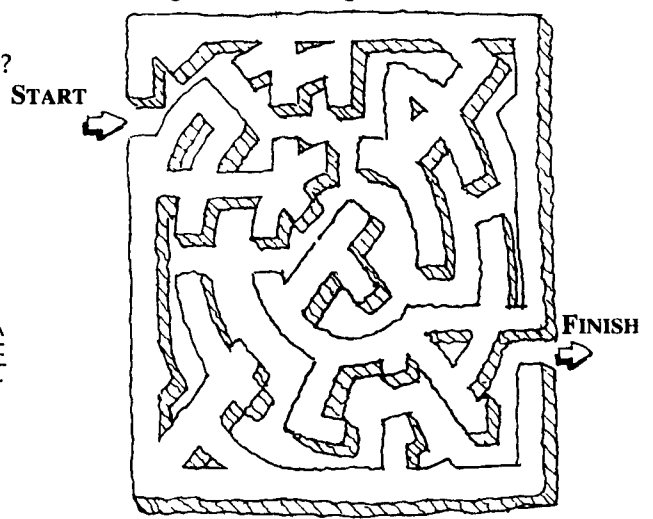

Traveling Tim

Tim just got back from a trip to France, New York City, Mexico and Hawaii. He picked up a model of the Eiffel Tower in France, a lei in Hawaii, a sombrero in Mexico and a T-shirt in New York. If Tim never sets anything down, can you put these pictures in order?

CONCORDE

How fast can you run? No matter how fast you are, the Concorde can go faster. The Concorde is the first passenger plane to travel faster than the speed of sound. The Concorde can go about 1,320 mph—that's almost twice as fast as sound can travel!

The Concorde flew for the first time on January 21, 1976, after almost 14 years of planning and research.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Our 15 grandchildren are scattered all over the country. There is a wide difference in age, from 20 years to six months. Some are raised in cities, some in the country and some on a farm. Thus, their background will probably affect their choice of occupations. Two of them are attending college and some are not yet in first grade. Due to the big differences in ages, some children in the same family do not get to know each other very well.

Our oldest daughter went off to college in New York state when our youngest daughter was only 2-years-old. Now that they are older, they have much more in common — jobs and children. Through e-mail, they can communicate regularly.

It is a pleasure to see our three grandchildren grow up on the farm. Occasionally, they stay with us, and we get to know them better. I was touched by a message in a Valentine that one of them made for me. It said, "If there was a star I could wish upon, I would wish you were younger."

Isn't that a thought?

Their interests are quite varied. One studies piano, one takes ballet lessons, while other grandchildren have sports on their minds. They spend so much time on sports that they have become quite good in soccer and basketball.

Our children worked on the farm and did not have the time to devote to sports. But they were quite active in 4-H activities and achieved many honors there. Some of them even traveled to national events.

Living far apart is not conducive to closeness. However, it does make our get-togethers that much more special. The next generation will certainly be even more scattered than the present one, but let's hope that they remember their roots.

Talking About Work Across Generations

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — During the past 30 years, the young and the elderly have begun to live — and play — in increasingly different worlds. This separation between the generations has been linked to the increase in negative stereotypes toward the aging. At the same time, younger people, who are in need of adult guidance and relationships, often find little opportunity for meaningful exchanges with senior adults.

Against this backdrop, there is growing support for the view that in order to strengthen our families and our communities, we need to nurture opportunities for people to come together across generational lines to share views and experiences and provide support for one another.

Fortunately, people of all ages like to talk. Issues related to the world of work — an area for which young and old often hold divergent views — can be counted on to generate lively discussion and debate.

Teens today are growing up with different opportunities and ideas about work than their parents and grandparents. Robert Eisenberger's "Blue Monday: The Loss of the Work Ethic in America" provides a historical account of the "Protestant work ethic" (some prefer the phrase "personal work ethic" to accommodate various faiths) and how it was an integral part of America's pioneer past. Many argue this value system is still at the core of the American psyche. As a society, we "officially" value such qualities as diligence, hard work, pride of accomplishment and a willingness to withstand privations and overcome hardships. Yet, current snapshots taken of American attitudes toward work reveal very mixed images and perceptions.

Young adults are less likely to refer to the "personal work ethic" than to themes of disillusionment and disconnection. In Studs Terkel's "Working: People Talk about What They Do All Day and How They Feel about What They Do," young adults speak of their sense of dissatisfaction with work and perceptions of work as being alienating. For example, a 28-year-old health care writer laments the demeaning nature of the world of work and the tendency of many older adults to define themselves by their jobs. She states, "But nobody pays for you being you, so I'm at the Institution — for the moment."

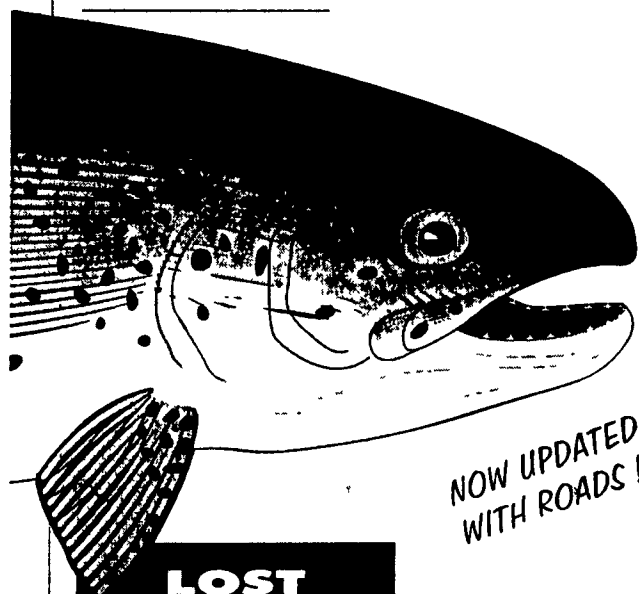

Differences in work-related attitudes held by different generations can be viewed as symptomatic of larger societal changes. Particularly in rapidly changing societies, the young and the elderly speak different "languages," dress differently, eat differently and hold different ideas about such issues as sexuality, gender roles, marriage, leisure and technology.

The key to bridging these perceptual differences is dialogue. It's through intergenerational dialogue that young people and older adults can gain access to each other's experiences, hopes and concerns.

A truly healthy society must be built upon a sense of respect for the perceptions and experiences of all of its citizens. It may not always be easy, but the joys of joining together and celebrating our differences as well as our similarities far outweigh the difficulties. Since work is a topic of interest to people in all stages of their life, it is an ideal discussion channel for promoting intergenerational understanding and acceptance.

Streams and Lakes

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is also known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 x 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well -- until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Stream Maps of Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Michigan and New England (CT, MA, VT, NH, RI)

Why every fisherman needs these maps

It is estimated that 10% of all the fishermen catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into... there's a sure way to up your odds... simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few fishermen ever fish.

Professor Higbee's Stream Maps are the first and only highly detailed maps of their kind... showing virtually all of the streams, rivers and lakes in each state.

RAVE REVIEWS

"It is amazingly detailed and names some creeks in the Mohawk Valley that can't even be found on topographic maps."

John Pitarres

Long-Term Family Business Built On Trees

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

MILLERSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — According to Mary Lee Zechman, grocery shoppers can thank Native American Indians for the maple syrup they used on their pancakes this morning.

From its long-ago discovery by the Indians and use by the first colonists to today's sticky buns, maple trees have helped to make America a little sweeter.

Zechman is the third generation to tap trees in Tioga County. Now residing in Lancaster, she is the sales representative for the inventory produced by the family-run operation.

Across Generations

The family business was begun by Zechman's grandfather, Oren Patterson, who owned the Tioga County farm in the early 1800s.

Zechman's father, Clifton, took over the farm and produced about 600 buckets of syrup for bartering, according to Zechman. In that time period, the syrup was used to sweeten foods, since sugar was sometimes a scarce commodity.

"What wasn't needed for the family would be taken to the local store and used for trade," she said. She remembers a dipper hanging on the tank for a drink of cold sap for thirsty helpers.

"We (the Patterson family) all helped from the time we were old enough to walk through snow and carry buckets. We also helped wash the 600 buckets by hand, which was done in the spring before they were put out," Zechman has two younger brothers. Her brother Richard bought the farm and is now the farm's sugar master.

Family bonding time was never a problem for the Petersons during sugaring time. A team approach works the best to during the process of tapping trees.

"When the time came to help, everybody came home and tapped. I usually bore the hole and my husband pounds the spile in."

Zechman and her husband, Richard, have three children.

The Petersons have 26,000 taps this year in trees in Sabinville, Tioga County. "Our trees are all native," she said. "Nothing has ever been planted." These trees yielded approximately 67,000 gallons of syrup last year. They are located in 12 different "sugar bushes," a group of trees in a small area.

This year may prove to be interesting, as winter keeps an extended grip on the area. "This year the season is later than usual. It's been too cold and there's still snow in the woods, so the roots are cold. This is one of the latest seasons that I ever remember."

"Maple syrup is one product that you are totally at the mercy of the weather, there's nothing you can do about how much you are going to make. Last year the season was cold, then we had an early spring, so most of the producers only made 30 percent of what they usually do."

A new, fuel-oil run turbo evaporator, in its first season of operation, should help speed production. The evaporator takes off 52 gallons of syrup, not sap, an hour.

"We started out with wood burning evaporator, one my grandfather had used," said Zechman. "There are five turbo evaporators in Canada, but this is the first one in the U.S."

Other transitions have changed the face, and the pace, of sap harvesting. In place of the traditional, familiar wooden buckets, tubes connected to several trees take the sap from the tree to larger pipelines. "We still hang some buckets for sentimental reasons," said Zechman. "For tours, we hang them along the roads. Throughout the woods everything has plastic tubing."

In 1994 the first new section of the sugarhouse was built, added onto in 1996 and followed in 1997 by a warehouse.

"Everything's done the same as it used to be done, just the equipment has changed. We've moved from a hand to a power-driven auger, and from metal to plastic spiles," she noted. However, augers and spiles are still necessary elements at each spring harvest.

Mary Lee Zechman has been involved in the sugaring business all of her life. Here she displays the unique bottles and baskets produced by Patterson Farms.

Sap consists of two percent sugar and 98 percent water, which, considering fuel and labor expenses, makes syrup a pricey commodity to manufacture. Approximately 40-50 gallons of sap make one gallon of syrup.

The Maple Process

Requiring 40-degree days and nights of freezing temperatures for best sap flow, the season lasts three to six weeks. "When the tree buds come, the tree undergoes a chemical change and the sap gets bitter and sticky," she said.

Up to three spiles may tap one large tree. Connecting two to three trees together, plastic tubing moves the sap into a larger pipeline. This larger pipeline handles the flow of additional trees also hooked to tubing. An even larger pipeline running through the woods then takes the sap to a collecting tank.

In contrast, Zechman remembers helping to collect and empty the buckets twice daily into a collecting tank on sled runners pulled behind a steady horse.

"Now the tanks are on the back of a dump truck," she said. The Pattersons bought the steel back of a milk truck, which the sap is emptied into. The truck then feeds the sap automatically into the evaporator.

Once in the sugarhouse, "it's a reverse osmosis process. The sap grows through and a percentage of water is taken out before it goes into the evaporator. At this time the liquid is a raw sap and needs to be cooked to move it from clear to the dark honey color characteristic of maple products."

The evaporator has six divisions that the sap moves through. Cold, raw sap pushes in and moves the other sap forward to the next pan until it is finished and through the last and final pan. An automatic draw off from the evaporator puts the syrup in larger dated and numbered drums.

A variety of jug sizes ensure that there is a size to fit everyone's taste for syrup.

A grading system from Vermont provides the standard which the syrup is measured against. "The faster you can get it to evaporate from the time it's in the tree, the lighter the syrup. If it doesn't sit the lighter it is."

Any syrup sold must be graded in this coloring system. Grade A Light is usually produced in the first run of the season. This syrup is usually kept for making candies and creams. The major part of the season Grade A Medium, which is the all-purpose syrup. The darker syrup, produced as the season gets warmer, is used for baking. "Bakeries buy it for sticky buns. It has more flavor. They all have the same sugar content. The light is sweet but not as 'mapley.' The flavor gets stronger with the darker color."

The very dark and strong syrup is used for the commercial syrup. In May, buyers from Vermont buy the dark syrup which is used for flavoring for the pancake syrup seen on grocery store shelves. Zechman estimates that only 10 percent of those syrups is actual maple syrup.

"That's why I work very hard to educate children. If those children know that and then grow up then those children will grow up and want to have natural products when they go grocery shopping," Zechman often finds herself in classrooms as she teaches children the maple syrup process.

In addition she uses the maple sugar to produce hundreds of bags of cotton candy at the classroom festivals that she is invited to.

A broad variety of maple products are made from syrup. When the syrup is evaporated further it becomes maple cream, a product with the consistency of peanut butter. "You can put it on anything warm, bagels, toast,

Maple Harvester adage

During the season, which may last from three to six weeks, the forest is laced with plastic tubing. These tubes connect the trees and transport the sap to larger collection tanks.

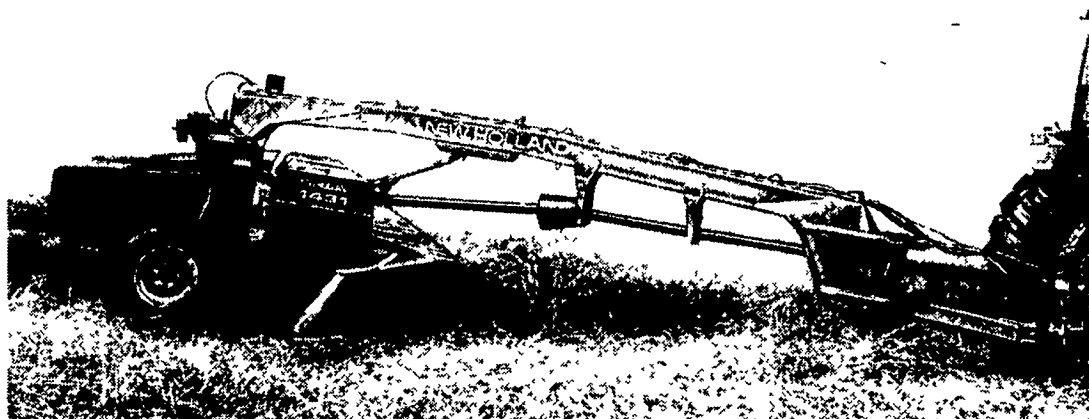

Larger trees may be tapped by up to three spiles.

Y ask

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask—You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

Or, you may e-mail questions and answers to lgood.eph@lnpnews.com

Please clarify what question you are answering when responding.

Do not send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply. If we receive the answer, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details. We will not publish your phone number unless you request it.

QUESTION — Tim Bowgeois is an intern at the New Jersey Museum of Agriculture and is conducting research on the use of steam power for agriculture in New Jersey during the 1800s and early 1900s. His research is focused on the how, when, where, to what extent, and possibly who used steam tractors or engines in agriculture and other related fields such as lumber harvesting. Does anyone know of steam engine and tractor manufacturers or dealers that were based in New Jersey during that era. Any assistance would be greatly appreciated. Contact Tim at Rutgers, State University of New Jersey, 18384 CPO Way, New Brunswick, NJ 08901-8633 or phone (856) 447-5259.

Business Built On Trees

English muffins, use it as a cake topping, dip soft pretzels in it, or drizzle it over hot popcorn." Because the product will separate as it slowly turns back into syrup in a warmer climate. Maple cream is cooked and cooled as soon as possible.

"We used to put the pan in the snow bank," remembered Zechman. Now the Pattersons put the product in the freezer and let it slowly come back to room temperature before it is stirred to a lighter and creamier consistency. The candy also becomes lighter and is poured into molds.

More evaporation yields maple candies, which will also melt into a puddle of maple syrup in time.

Further evaporation yields maple sugar, which has really caught on, according to Zechman. "It never becomes a hard block, it stays dry and fine. It has a mild maple flavor and can be substituted for any sweetener and is really complemented by cinnamon."

Pennsylvania Opportunity

Two to three sugar maple trees in the backyard can be sugar makers," said Zechman. "Sap will come from any maple, but the best comes from the sugar maple. After tapping the trees, just keep pouring the sap into a sauce pan and when it's finished it's maple syrup. People are so proud to think they've made it with their own hands."

"Pennsylvania only uses five percent of the potential maple production possible," she said. "We have enough maples to be neck-and-neck with Vermont if all of our resources were tapped.

The Northeastern states do a lot to promote maple. The majority of people I contact are amazed that Pennsylvania makes syrup. There's an opportunity there for farmers that have small woodland on their property for added income.

"Maple syrup has always been a supplement to farmer. The two help each other out. We try to think what we can do to promote maple in Pennsylvania, because Pennsylvania makes wonderful maple syrup. The flavor is outstanding."

Zechman's grandfather and father were also dairy farmers. The dairy operation, in fact, continues today in a scaled-down version.

Harvesters of maple trees and encroaching development are posing a challenge to the maple business, however, as the Pattersons are finding themselves fighting to keep the trees they are now tapping. The family leases three or four farms each year to tap the trees. According to Zechman trees take 100 years before they are in production.

Marketing Strategies

Merchandising in the Washington, DC area has given rise to a worldwide clientele. Zechman travels to DC twice a week from the end of May to Thanksgiving. Tourists from Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Holland, and England have cut across the Mall's lawn to either take or send home products from the Peterson farm.

"The market in DC has given a tremendous basket business," she said. Gift baskets, which range in price from $12-$60, are custom-made and include an assortment of Peterson products. For example a breakfast basket hosts ham, pancake mix, and maple syrup.

Inventory which may appear in baskets also includes maple barbecue sauce, maple salad dressing and even lamps made from syrup jugs. Homemade apple butter and wild violet and dandelion jams, among other varieties, round out the goods found in baskets and on shelves.

Uniquely-shaped bottles with long necks, painted scenes, or in the maple leaf shape are complemented by tins sporting nostalgic scenes.

In addition to marketing in the nation's capitol, Zechman supplies local stores and farm markets. A trip to Tioga County each week keeps Zechman supplied with Patterson Farms merchandise.

Besides selling maple products, the Patterson family is also a distributor for equipment, "anything you need to do sugaring," said Zechman, from fancy glass bottles to tubing to stiles.

Although she is busy, she does enjoy her work. "It's a fun business. There's no down time."

Quilt Color Seminar

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension is offering a Quilt Color Seminar. Discover the language of color for your quilts through learning about color combinations and their relationship to each other. This is a non-sewing class.

Participants will be using fabric swatches in multiple combinations to see which fabrics work together.

Class will meet on Saturday, April 21 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster. The instructor is Carol Lee Shirk. Cost of the workshop is $35. Preregistration is required. Call Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 394-6851 for information.

A new evaporator in the sugarhouse helps take off the water. The sap coming from the tree is 98 percent water and two percent sugar.

The back of an old milk truck serves as a large collection unit for the sap coming from the trees.

3.4 Acre Real Estate

Saturday, April 21, 2001 at 10:00 AM

Located in Chester County at 5812 Strasburg Road, West Sadsbury Township, Atglen, PA. 2 1/2 miles east of Route 41 in Gap or 3 miles west of Parkesburg.

REAL ESTATE TO BE SOLD AT 10 A.M.

A nice property, consisting of 3.4 acres with 3 homes, barn, well and septic system. Primary home is stucco with eat-in kitchen, living room, dining room, and den on first floor. Second floor consists of 3 bedrooms and a full bath with hot water heat.

Second home is one story with eat-in kitchen, living room, 2 bedrooms, full bath and full basement with hot air heat.

Third home is one story frame with kitchen, living room, 1 bedroom, and bath with electric heat.

Barn with stalls for horses, large forebay and attached 2 car garage.

This property has a lot of possibilities. It has the potential for 2 rental homes and a large barn with rental space. This would make a good investment property or good property for family with a home for parents.

Ira and Shirley Parmer are responsible for finding English white ironstone made between 1840-1860. The couple is commissioned by the Department of Interior and the National Park Service to help in restoration of historical places by setting tables with the "farm china" and providing tea services, chamber pots, handblown jars, and other pieces for display.

Heavier than porcelain china, ironstone was more suitable for early American life. The English white ironstone appears to be bluish white in color compared to the creamy shades of the more commonplace American ironstone.

Parmers Set Tables With English White Ironstone

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — English white ironstone has traveled a long way since crates of the glistening white tableware were first placed in the hulls of ships heading for America. The crates helped balance the ship on the open seas.

During the 1840s-1860s, Americans were eager to replace their pewter and wooden plates with the bluish white ironstone.

Heavier than its china counterpart, ironstone was more suitable for life in the new world and much more affordable than the coveted china porcelain.

English ironstone, the American substitute for fine china, was often called farm china because it was heavier and opaque.

According to Shirley and Ira Parmer, Lititz, English ironstone was made for the American market by a small England factory. The Parmers deal only in ironstone made between 1840-1860. Pieces from that era are higher quality and distinguishable by their blue-white color when compared with the more commonplace creamy-colored ironstone.

Between the 1840-1850, English white ironstone was most often designed with Gothic-shaped edges. During the next 20 years, design trends became plainer in shapes, mostly round and ovals, but were often embossed with floral designs. Later, ironstone became plainer and thinner with no embossing.

Some of the early English white ironstone pieces are stamped underneath with a diamond-shaped stamp, signifying with letter and number the day, date, and month they were made.

"These registered patterns in London were similar to our patents today," Parmer said of the registration marks.

For collection purposes, it is easier to track the history of the pieces that are stamped, but this does not necessarily make the pieces more valuable. Because the pieces were made mostly within a 30-year period, the bluish-white color serves as an easily identifiable date. Pieces are most often collected for style, embossing pattern, and for items such as sugar bowls and creamers.

When purchasing a piece, the Parmers said that condition is extremely important. Items should not have defects.

The Parmers, who deal in a variety of antiques, became interested in English white ironstone when they purchased a few pieces about 10 years ago. Fascinated, they researched the ironstone and began specializing in it. They quickly became known for providing excellent quality and became one of the largest collectors on the East Coast.

Since the Parmers began dealing in the English ironstone, home decorating guru Martha Stewart, who owns an extensive collection, and many magazine

Pickle Casters

Pickle casters with intricately decorated silver forks or tines hanging at the sides were popular in households from 1840-1920. Before World War I, the castors were more ornate. Today the colored casters are rarer and in demand by collectors. Displayed at the York Antiques Show and Sale, this collection is by Oakligh Antiques, Aberdeen, Md.

Gorham's Martel'e Silver Revived Handmade Craftsmanship

Although Martel'e silver had its roots in the English Arts and Crafts movement, the designs were typical of the Art Nouveau stylized motifs popular near the end of the 19th century. The word "Martel'e" is French for hand-hammered.

As beautiful as it was, the silver was produced for only 15 years by Gorham, beginning in 1897. Introduced at New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in 1897, Gorham went on to win five gold medals for his silver at the 1900 Paris "Exposition Universal." At a time when American silver manufacturers were turning to machinery and technology to create decorative arts in the Art Nouveau style, Gorham used hand hammering.

Clues: Under the guidance of William Codman, Gorham's chief designer, hand hammering was used to achieve a soft, fluid effect, without the elongated lines that typified Art Nouveau designs. Each piece was different. Beginning with a flat piece of silver, decorating was done with embossed and chased techniques. Hammer marks identify them as being handmade. It took two craftsmen to create each piece; the silversmith to mold it, and a chaser to make the design. The ground was lightly hammered. Gorham twice raised the purity of the silver used to make Martel'e, in order to make the silver more malleable and easier to work by hand.

Martel's was marked with the word, over an eagle, that topped the usual Gorham mark at the time (a lion, anchor and initial G). Underneath it was marked 950-1,000 FINE (the sterling standard for fine silver).

Since only 4,800 pieces were produced and Gorham kept meticulous records, speciality dealers can keep track of the one-of-a-kind pieces.

Naturalistic and often verging on the fantastic in design, many of the most popular motifs were fruits and foliage, flowers, nymphs, and mermaids.

These days some of the finest pieces can be seen at top museums, including The Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, The Cleveland Museum, The Detroit Museum and The High Museum of Art.

Even in its day, a small centerpiece bowl could cost more than $2,000, for which it currently sells.

Among the great variety of Martel'e pieces are small bowls, loving cups as well as elaborate pitchers, tea services, candelabras, and sets of chargers. Flatware was rarely made in complete sets.

Prices can range from $6,500 to $180,000 for individual pieces to as much as $1,000,000 or more for elaborate designs, including museum-quality pieces like the newer made for the 1900 Paris Exposition.

Zita Waters Bell, a long-time antiques show organizer, says "when Martel'e is on display, it attracts extraordinary attention, in part because it's appearance is so different from traditional silver made by American silversmiths."

Dealer and private curatorial consultant Sara W. Parker says the rarity of the pieces available makes it difficult for collectors to find. Recently, she acquired the largest Martel'e flatware service, commissioned by Harry Ford Sinclair, the Oklahoma oil baron who almost brought down President Warren Harding's administration with the Teapot Dome Scandal. "Martel'e is collected by people who appreciate its fluid, "naturalistic" fine workmanship, and rarity. I'm delighted when I find examples of this kind of silversmithing talent that will never be seen again.

Antique Detective

Don't let the high prices frighten you away. Martel'e was made in many small pieces that are under $3,000. Not all have been discovered.

Questions And Answers

This tall china vase was shipped from Germany after World War II. It has no marks. It is in pinks, blues and has Oriental figures in panels. Can you tell me anything about it?

L.M.K. — Salina, Kan.

Here is proof that antiques travel far from home. Your Chinese vase in the Rose Medallion pattern, without marks, was made 1850-1870. It could sell in a shop from $900 up.

I have inherited a fine Oriental rug. I would like to get it appraised for selling purposes. Who would I call?

S.G. — Hollywood, Fla.

Look in the Yellow pages for local appraisers listed under one of the appraisal societies, such as American Society of Appraisers. They can recommend a specialist.

I would like to know the value of this two-piece, cherry, plantation desk, c.1790, since I would like to ship it to my children.

E.H. — Coconut Creek, Fla.

From your photo, your planter's desk originally came from North Carolina. However, the turnings on the legs, and feet point to 1820-1830. Similar pieces have sold at auction for around $3,000-$4,000.

Ironstone

Although some of the more common dishes sell between $30-$35 a piece, $200 for a sugar bowl, and $500-$800 for washbowl and pitcher sets, the prices paid for rarer pieces have skyrocketed recently. The Parmer were amazed when they offered an 11-inch Gothic-style pitcher on E-bay recently and a bidder paid $1,700 for it.

"For our own home, we do not collect what we sell and do not sell what we collect," Parmer said "Otherwise, we'd never want to part with a piece."

The Parmer display collections at 15 shows annually and sell through the Internet. For more information, call (717) 560-1987.

Hoober, Steiger Host Anniversary Celebration, Convention

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) — Recently, Hoober Incorporated and Steiger Tractors hosted a special event in celebration of Hoober's 25th anniversary of selling Steiger tractors.

Event attendees were Steiger owners who were also agriculture operators.

The event was conducted in two days at the Lancaster Host Resort and Conference Center.

Theme of the anniversary event was "emerging technologies," with a focus on the latest technology.

According to general manager Tom Yohe, "This event had two purposes. We wanted to thank the Steiger owners for placing their trust in us at Hoober and with our partners at Case-IH, and we also wanted to introduce the new Steiger STX tractors."

The event began on Sunday evening with a banquet followed by a 15-minute presentation on the history of Steiger Tractors.

On Monday morning, the meeting continued with presentations, including special question-and-answer sessions. The first meeting of the day featured a detailed introduction of the new STX Steiger.

Roger Lewno, product manager of high horsepower tractors for Case-IH, hosted this introduction.

Brubaker Agronomics introduced some fresh ideas on precision agriculture. First Union and Farm Credit joined together to discuss financing, leasing, and capital management.

Other emerging technology was discussed from a variety of companies.

Asgrow Works To Meet Grower Demand

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Preliminary industry research on 2001 planting intentions shows strong grower demand for Roundup Ready soybeans.

"Asgrow is the premier brand for Roundup Ready soybeans, and current varieties have shown excellent yields and very strong performance," said Monsanto soybean market manager Rob Hannam.

Doane research shows Asgrow was the favorite brand of Roundup ready soybean growers in 2001, and Hannam said the company is working hard to provide high-quality seed to meet the expected demand.

"Soybean producers have come to expect top seed quality and germination rates from Asgrow," said Hannam. "That's a challenge this year since damp weather, insect damage and disease took its toll on soybean seed production last fall. But we're committed to delivering the best quality seed in the business."

Growers should contact their local seed dealer for availability in their area.

In most areas, Asgrow will maintain an industry-high standard of 85 percent or 90 percent germination. Asgrow seed is put through a series of rigorous tests at various stages during conditioning and after packaging to ensure high quality and purity.

Hannam cautions growers not to rely only on the seed's visual appearance this year, but instead to look for the labeled germination rates. "Soybean producers need to ask more questions and monitor quality levels more closely in this challenging year," he said.

"The best measure of seed quality is the seed company's standard for germination and purity, and how willing and able the seed company is to stand behind that commitment," he said. "Seeds that are discolored can still produce good germination. On the other hand, some soybean seed may look fine but have a low germination rate."

TeeJet Offers Simplified Buyer's Guide

WHEATON, Ill. — The TeeJet team took a good look at their best-selling, most recognized items, and decided to simplify how customers find and order these products.

Now the TeeJet products in popular demand are listed in the new TeeJet Spray Products Buyer's Guide 201. This 32-page guide fully illustrates the best in spray nozzles, electronic control systems, spray guns, strainers, valves, and other fluid handling components.

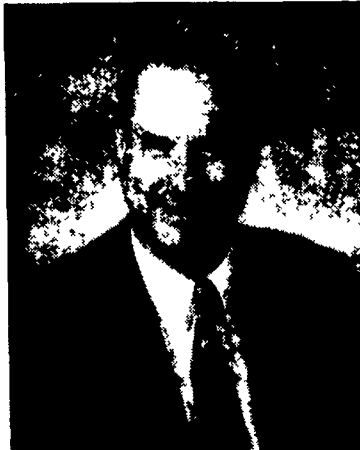

Items are easier for customers to find. The catalog is easier to distribute, and best of all, it's computer-friendly. The TeeJet Buyer's Guide is available for download in Acrobat® PDF format from their website at www.teejet.com.

Tom Reed, regional manager, TeeJet East, said, "The abundant use of graphics has greatly simplified nozzle selection in the new TeeJet catalog. We've also addressed applicator concerns to manage spray drift by including a wealth of information on droplet size. By simply downloading the catalog from the Web, applicators or consultants can even carry a copy on their laptop for quick access."

All of TeeJet's charts, reference tables, and sprayer calibration tips have been included.

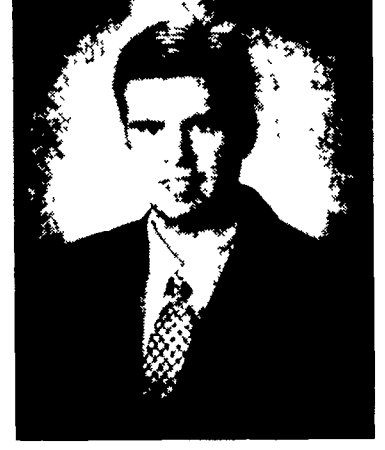

Pennfield Makes Staff Announcement

George DeMers

Bob Zeller

Joan Taber

Clarence Stouffer

Mike Sullivan

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Pennfield Feeds has made the following staff announcement.

Rick Amour has been named sales manager for Consultant Link, a subsidiary of Pennfield Corporation. Amour will concentrate on providing feeds and/or ingredients to specialized large dairy herds.

Rick Holder, a Virginia Tech graduate with a degree in agricultural education, will be expanding the Pennfield product line into the Virginia and North Carolina market. Rich has experience in livestock nutrition, farm supply sales, and has been a livestock feeding consultant.

Everett Hopper, a New York native and a SUNY Morrisville Ag and Tech College graduate, brings several years of cow scoring, breeding, and schedule coordinating experience to Pennfield Dairy Feed Sales. Hopper will be servicing accounts in Lancaster County as a dairy feed consultant.

Tim Casey. As a dairy feed consultant in northern Pennsylvania, dairy farmers will find Casey's dedication and service history will be a great benefit.

George DeMers. Previously a regional sales manager with Diamond V Mills, DeMers will be responsible for the development and service of dairy feed accounts in Pennsylvania. As well as many years experience, he also has a bachelor's degree in dairy production from Penn State.

Bob Zeller. As a dairy feed consultant providing service in the eastern Lancaster County region, Zeller will be responsible for calling on dairy customers/prospects in that area.

Jeff Conroe

Alden Bowman

Joan Taber. A resident of Trumansburg, N.Y., Taber comes to Pennfield Feeds with more than 20 years experience from Agway. Taber will be pursuing her dairy feed sales career in areas of New York.

Clarence Stouffer. Experienced dairy herdsman, involved in a farming partnership in western Pennsylvania, Stouffer joins Pennfield's dairy sales team as a dairy feed consultant. He will be working in Washington County, Maryland and Western Franklin County, Pennsylvania.

Mike Sullivan. Sullivan, resident of New York, brings more than 15 years of feed sales experience with him to Pennfield. He also has held the position of herdsman for a 250-head dairy cowherd Sullivan will be responsible for Oneida, Madison, and Chenango counties of central New York.

Jeff Conroe. ARPAS-certified as a registered animal scientist, and a graduate of Cobleskill Ag Tech, Conroe had been employed by I.L. Richer for the past 18 years. Conroe will be the area manager for central New York.

Alden Bowman. Bowman has been named director of sales for the Ag Products Division of Pennfield Corporation. Prior to joining Pennfield, Bowman had been the general manager for Poulin Grain, Inc. With a bachelor's degree in ag and resource economics from the University of Vermont, Bowman has been involved in the dairy feed business for 14 years. He has held the position of facility manager, dairy feed sales, operations manager, and general manager. Bowman's responsibilities for Pennfield will include the management and direction for the entire sales force in promoting the sale of Pennfield products as well as the services provided by Pennfield.

Adams Co. 4-H Members To Compete In Communication Contest

GETTYSBURG, (Adams Co.) — Adams County 4-H members will be vying for special honors and awards when they compete at County 4-H Presentation Night to be held April 24, 7 p.m., at the Adams County Agricultural and Natural Resources Center, 670 Old Harrisburg Road, Gettysburg.

You are invited to join the 4-H family, as 4-H members present communications skills. There are three communication formats you will be able to see in action: 1) the presentation is an organized illustrated talk using models, posters, slides, or other visual aids to help the member make his/her point; 2) the prepared speech is an organized talk with no illustrations and involves the use of words, voice, and gestures to help the member make his/her point; and 3) the impromptu speech is a talk on a familiar 4-H topic assigned to the member with 10 minutes to organize thoughts and involves the use of words, voice, and gestures to help the member make his/her point.

Those 4-H members participating have been busy preparing their presentations and speeches under the supervision of their local 4-H club leaders and parents. High scoring individuals in the Senior Division will be eligible to compete in the State 4-H Presentation Contest July 24-26, at Penn State University.

The purpose of 4-H Presentation Night is both educational and competitive in nature. Through this experience, 4-H members develop self-confidence, self-esteem, communication skills, and increase their subject knowledge. Each preregistered participant at 4-H Presentation Night will receive a 4-H T-shirt presented by the Adams County 4-H Senate. Refreshments will be served by the Abbottstown 4-H Club and registration will be done by the 4-H Beef Club.

Bros. Inc.
Case IH FAST CUT
High Speed Case IH 8309
Disc Mower Conditioner, 9' Cut

Also Super Deal on 12 Foot Center Pivot Model 8312

The Case International 8309 disc mower conditioner is a fast cutter. High speed, heat-treated discs spin at over 180 miles per hour to cut a swath of more than nine feet where a sicklebar machine might plug up.

Wet and/or dense hay, tangled grasses or weeds, ant hills and rodent mounds don't faze the 8309. You keep on going for top productivity.

Wide, intermeshing rolls gently, yet effectively condition the crop and lay down a wide swath or windrow sized for your harvest equipment. In-field adjustments are quick and easy, too.

When you need the fast cut of a disc machine, see the Case International 8309.

Make Your Purchase Today! If You're Looking For A Small Round Baler For A Small Price, See Binkley & Hurst Bros. Today!

If You're in the Market For a Round Baler, Make Sure You
Look At the Case IH 8420
* Many standard features you might pay extra for with other machines - features like dual tension arms, side-mounted gathering wheels, centrally located drive system, bale counter, mechanical bale-full alert and a "tailgate latched" indicator
* Make up to a 550-pound bale. Requires just 30
PTO horsepower

* And, big value. You can probably buy a new 8420 for what other used models would cost you

And, you get more than an economical baler. We are committed to providing genuine, value-priced Case IH parts, professional and reliable service, and flexible financing.

Open Throat Design to Eliminate Plugging
Variable Height Bale from Only 30" Up To 54" for Manual Handling in Small Barns and 39" Width Works in all Types of Crop Residue including Corn Fodder.

Call Don Beidler today and get a Kubota BX 2200, the small utility tractor that is revolutionizing the market

The Kubota BX 2200 tractors from Hooper feature a radically new concept in tractor design, combining the strength and versatility of a compact utility tractor with the feel and functionality of a garden tractor. The hydrostatic transmission and unique 4WD design allows smooth transfer of power to the front wheels at all turning angles, for efficient operation in tight places.

The BX 2200 is the only tractor with a standard 540 PTO and Category 1 3-point hitch in its class, which makes it quick and easy to attach and detach front loaders and mowers. From light yard work to heavier loader work around the home, farm, or job site, the BX-series is the sub compact tractor for you.

Along with every Kubota tractor comes Hooper's experienced tractor service technicians that specialize in hydrostatic transmissions and Hooper's experienced parts support personnel to keep your Kubota running strong.

Krause 7400 Discs... Engineered for the Way You Farm

Why Should You Choose The New Krause 7400 Rockflex for Your Next Disc?

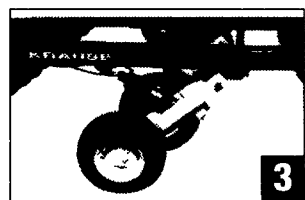

1 Double Offset Designed Frame

The 7400's strength starts with a rugged 5' x 7' mainframe that comes complete with a three-year warranty. The double offset gang design provides a level-field finish, the "trademark" of a Krause disc

2 Rockflex Bearing Arms

New, heavier Rockflex bearing arms feature a full 1 1/2" thick by 2 1/2" wide standard to flex over the toughest obstacles. These bearing arms are heat treated for durability.

3 Heavy-Duty Walking Tandem

Krause's heavy-duty walking tandem system smooths out rough fields, and rough roads when transporting. This feature gives you more precise depth control and more stable discing.

4 Self-Leveling Hitch

The self-leveling hitch on the Krause 7400 features an adjustable leveling link for fore to aft leveling changes. Self-leveling mechanism is spring cushioned for protection.

5 Rigid Scrapers

Five inch wide rigid scrapers are heat treated and hot formed from the same high carbon steel we use in our disc blades. The result is an extremely strong and efficient scraper that resists wear.

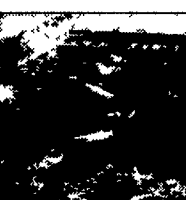

6 Gang Bearings

Krause SuperSeal regreasable gang bearings are as tough and durable as the discs they come on. They are protected in a ductile cast iron holder and encased in a heavy rubber boot to absorb shock.

7 Wing Fold Hinges

Massive 1 1/2" x 15" hinge bolts on the Krause 7400 distribute folding forces over a wide area, not concentrating them in a narrow hinge like some competitive designs.

8 Forward Action Wing Wheels

The forward action wing wheels rotate close to the front gangs for precise depth control on the Krause 7400. This design limits the need for optional front gauge wheels that are necessary on other brands.

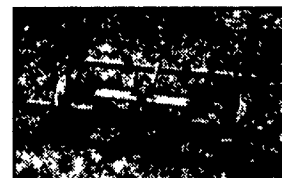

9 Heavy Cast Spools

The heavy cast spools multiply the strength of the Krause disc gang, making it the strongest in the industry. The design supports the disc blade more positively without creating a "stress line" like competitive designs.

All New & Used Products Backed By Hooper Parts & Service

"There is no comparison to Hooper on service, they are tops. They almost always have the parts we need, and if they don't have them, they will get them for us. Hooper sells good products, they stand behind them, and that makes the products better."

Norman Laffey & Norm Jr., Cochranville, PA

"I have never dealt with a group of guys or a dealer that could be more friendly as far as service is concerned. The guys really know what they are doing - you call them and they are going to solve the problem for you, weekdays, weekends, whatever. When your dealer is as committed to the business as much as Hooper is, it really makes a difference."

Bruce Levertan, Woodbury Farms Enterprises, Queenstown, MD

"When you call Hooper, you speak to a knowledgeable person who knows what they're talking about. They're very easy to work with, very knowledgeable and they're very prompt. It always pays to have someone who will stand behind their products. They always have a large selection to choose from in terms of inventory, and they have the resources to get you what you need."

Rob Sebright, West Berlin, PA

At Last...

...a Boom Sprayer

for multi-crop produce farmer that is affordable and will do the job from sweet corn to melon crops.

With features like...

- 24 ft. one-side boom that allows for 50 ft. coverage between drive rows.
- Easy boom height adjustment from 2 ft. to 7 1/2 ft. for sweet corn.
- Hydraulic leveling on the go allows uniform boom height from the crop.
- 280 PSI, 28 GPM 3 diaphragm pump with power shaft for quick hookup.
- Adjustable wheel spacing and tongue height.
- NEW A-spring loaded hydraulic shock to control boom bounce.

Available with 300 or 400 Gallon Tanks

With the high cost of chemicals, the right sprayer is needed

PLANTER ACCURACY. DRILL CAPACITY.

- Team up MaxEmerge® Plus Planter openers on 15-inch spacing with a central-fill drill box
- Heavy residue is no match for the heavy-duty downforce (springs or exclusive pneumatic) and optional unit-mounted coulters.
- Mount this integral drill to the 1570 Caddy Cart for an easy-pulling machine (75-hp tractor minimum, 15-foot model) without the heavy-lift requirements usually associated with integral drills.
- Available in 15 & 20-foot widths.

NEW GEHL 8435 TMR

"Total Mix" Mixer Feeder

In Stock Ready For Immediate Delivery.

If your feeding program demands a heavy-duty mixer feeder with the ability to handle more high-quality, dry long stemmed hay (up to 30% by weight) Gehl has four models:

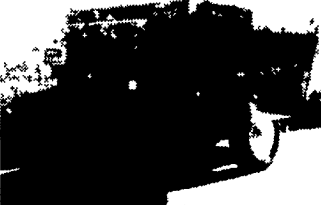

Model	Mixing Capacity	Model	Mixing Capacity
8285	256 cu. ft.	8435	358 cu. ft.
8335	306 cu. ft.	8500	410 cu. ft.

These units feature the unique "Hay Slicer Auger" with a pair of semi-circular dual knife assemblies on each bottom auger. The knives slice through long-stemmed hay for a quicker mix with less chance of wrapping.

Attention:

Kinze/John Deere Planter & No-Till Drill Owners

Did you know that those old cast iron closing wheels can be reconditioned to "like-new" performance for a fraction of replacement cost?

Now is the time to get ready for tough planting conditions like sod and dry, hard soil. We can help your older planter or drill to close those seed trenches properly. (See illustration)

Will your fields get the finishing touch?

Benefits include:

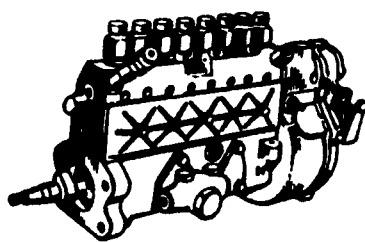

- ✓ Less closing pressure
- ✓ More uniform germination
- ✓ Improved stand population
- ✓ Increased yields

Penn State To Host Dairy And Livestock Alumni Reunion Weekend

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — If you graduated from Penn State with a degree in the dairy or livestock program areas, your major might have been Animal Husbandry, Dairy Husbandry, Animal Industry, Dairy Production, Animal Production or even Dairy and Animal Science.

The name of the major has changed many times over the years. The current undergraduate major is now called Animal Sciences, and encompasses all species under one name. As a matter of fact, the Dairy Science and Animal Science departments were separate until 1975, when the Department of Dairy and Animal Science was formed.

While the names have changed, one thing remains the same; the passion the alumni have for their alma mater. This is in large part due to the outstanding traditions of the student-run events held each spring: The Dairy Exposition and The Little International Livestock Exposition.

The Department of Dairy and Animal Science is excited to have the opportunity to sponsor a special gathering of alumni and friends this year as the 76th Dairy Exposition and the 84th Little International Livestock Exposition are occurring on the same day, April 21.

The Alumni Dinner-Dance, sponsored by the Penn State Stockmen's Club, will be held at the Elks Country Club, Boalsburg, Pa. Social hour begins at 6 p.m. and dinner is at 7 p.m. This event has been held the night before the Little I Show for many years and is a good opportunity for socializing and reuniting with old friends. Graduating seniors are invited to attend at the expense of the club. All alumni are invited to attend. The cost is $23 per person. You can make reservations by contacting Jana Peters at jp9@psu.edu or (814) 863-4198.

Because of the blue-white football game, we have reserved blocks of rooms at the following motels. The rooms are blocked under "PSU Dairy and Animal Science." There are still many rooms available, but you should make your reservations soon.

Sleep Inn; Phone (814) 235-1020.

Ramada Inn; Phone (814) 238-3001.

Motel 6; Phone (814) 234-1600.

The shows will begin at 8:30 on Saturday, April 21 at the Agricultural Arena. There will be three rings running concurrently. The Dairy Expo will use one ring exclusively. The Little I will have two rings set up as usual. One will be used first for the beef, followed by the horses, and in the other, the swine will be shown prior to the sheep.

Alumni, faculty and staff, and celebrity contests will be held as usual. Various student awards and recognitions will be made throughout the day. There will be a lunch stand provided by Students for the Responsible Use of Animals.

There will be one break from tradition this weekend; there will be no formal banquets following the shows. In lieu of the banquets, there will be an informal Little I/Dairy Expo Alumni Barbecue Picnic at the arena.

The barbecue is sponsored by the Department of Dairy and Animal Science, and there will be no charge for anyone who is attending the shows that day. The meal will be served around 4 p.m., at the conclusion of the shows. An awards and recognition program will occur between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. in order for us to honor our Distinguished Alumni and guests.

If you plan to attend either the Alumni Dinner-Dance Friday, April 20 or the Little I/Dairy Expo Barbecue on Saturday, April 21, please complete the form below and return it by April 13, 2001 to Jana Peters, 324 W.L. Henning Bldg., University Park, PA 16802.

Ohio Beef Cattle Farms Focus Of New Program

WOOSTER, Ohio - Statewide family beef cattle farms are the focus of a beef industry program designed to keep Ohio competitive in the market through education, industry alliances and economic opportunities.

The program, known as the Ohio Family Farm Beef Industry Network, will be implemented over a five-year period by Ohio State University researchers through the help of a $1.2 million U.S. Department of Agriculture grant.

Francis Fluharty, a researcher with OSU's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center and the program's project director, said the goal of the program is to develop an alliance among Ohio cow-calf producers, feedlot operators and meat packers to improve the education and profitability of cattle farmers who may be unable to keep up with industry standards.

"There are 28 million feeder calves produced in the U.S. - an industry that generates about $52 billion dollar a year. The economic benefit to Ohio is quite sizable," said Fluharty. "But the farm size in Ohio is small, averaging only 17 head of cattle. Most farmers raise cattle as a supplemental source of income, not as a sole business. Ohio only produces one percent of the nation's feeder calves. Though the benefits may be there, it's clear we are at an economic disadvantage."

Through the Ohio Family Farm Beef Industry Network, producers, feedlot operators and packers will have access to such information as how a calf is raised. Fluharty said the process, similar to that found in the poultry industry where a product is controlled from breeding to marketing, will benefit farmers when it comes to consumer safety issues and changes within the industry.

"Traceback in the beef industry is possible about 80 to 85 percent of the time, but it's not good enough. Historically, there is no information flow in the industry chain. Feedlot operators who buy calves know nothing of the product except its color and weight. They expect the calf to convert feed and stay healthy so they can sell it to the packer, who then grades the product," said Fluharty. "The marketing responsibility is placed on the packer. Through the program, the farmers involved will take responsibility for their own product. That way, through alliances, consumers can see that producers can come up with a reliable, consistent product."

The program will also keep those in the industry informed of changes or improvements, such as the mandatory individual animal identification program the USDA is investigating this year. Ohio State is implementing an electronic identification (EID) program at its research farms that involves ear-tagging cattle with a tag whose unique 16-digit identification number can be stored in a software program and accessed at any time during the production process. Such an innovation is designed to improve production practices and food safety.

"Farmers in Ohio may not be able to afford to continue their business if the USDA makes animal identification mandatory," said Fluharty. "With Ohio having over 25,000 people who own cattle, such a system in place would put a tremendous strain on our ability to educate farmers about the system. Such a system would be implemented over time, three to four years, but we need to work with producers now."

The Ohio Family Farm Beef Industry Network is similar to the five-state beef industry consortium that is also being implemented to keep producers informed of industry trends from calf conception to human consumption. Researchers from OSU, Purdue University, Michigan State University, University of Illinois and University of Kentucky were recently awarded a $2.5 million USDA grant to collaborate with state departments of agriculture, commodity organizations and industry representatives.

Fluharty said the projects may have similar goals, but the Ohio Family Farm Beef Industry Network focuses only on Ohio's beef industry.

"The five-state program involves producers facing the same type of scenarios we are in Ohio," said Fluharty. "But what makes this program different is that we have cow-calf producers, feedlot operators and packers all in Ohio that make branding capabilities more possible on a state level rather than on a regional level. The five-state initiative allows regional efforts, but may not provide sufficient incentives for independent packers and processors in Ohio."

Though the Ohio Family Farm Beef Industry Network is geared to reflect a production and marketing process similar to that in the poultry industry, having one company oversee the process is not realistic.

"The land mass required to raise cattle is just too large for one corporation to own and control," said Fluharty. "That's why professionals in the industry will become heavily involved in developing alliances." Such a move is underway now.

Five years ago, only 17 percent of beef cattle in the U.S. were marketed through an alliance or on a value-based grid. By 2000, the number jumped to 40 percent. Fluharty predicts that within the next three to five years, 60 or 70 percent of the industry will be marketed through such systems.

BioHio 2001 Will Bring Science To Life At Ohio State

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Science is part of everyone's daily life. Have fun learning how at BioHio 2001, an open house celebrating science and its role in Ohio's agriculture, food products and environment.

The event will be held on the Columbus campus of Ohio State University's College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday to Saturday, May 10-12.

Through hands-on demonstrations, exhibits and tours, visitors will learn about agriculture, the environment, gardening, managing wildlife, aquaculture or fish farming, precision agriculture, native plants, berries, plant diseases and more. Special activities are planned for children.

Visitors can bring samples of plant, weed and insect problems for identification and recommendations; get garden-variety soybean seeds with information on how to grow and cook them; learn how strawberries and black raspberries may reduce the risk of certain cancers; see how earthworms can help recycle organic waste, such as food scraps; learn how people unknowingly help spread weeds; learn about Ohio's native plants and how to grow them in the landscape; learn more about turfgrass varieties for the lawn; and get tips on managing wildlife in the backyard, forests and on the farm.

The Ohio State University Veterinary Hospital, the Horticulture and Crop Science greenhouses and the Aquaculture Laboratory will offer tours. Side trips also will be offered to Ohio State's Olentangy River Wetland Research Park and Ohio Stadium.

Live entertainment will be featured throughout each day. The BioHio theme is "Bringing Sciences to Life."

BioHio has been held in 1994, 1996 and 1998 at the college's Wooster campus of the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center. This is the first time it will be held in Columbus.

BioHio is sponsored by the college's components — Ohio State University Extension, OARDC, the Ohio State University Agricultural Technical Institute and Academic Affairs. Admission and parking are free.

Parking for BioHio will be north of the Schottenstein Center off of Fred Taylor Drive in the Schott Special Events Parking Lot. Access to the lot will be from Ackerman Road via state Route 315. Signs will be posted on state Route 315, Ackerman Road and Lane Avenue to direct visitors to event parking. Buses will shuttle visitors to the event from the parking area.

For more information about BioHio 2001, call (614) 292-3897 or visit the BioHio 2001 Website at <http://www.oardc.ohio-state.edu/biohio/>.

Web Farm Auction Listing Service Launched

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Manitoba — A new agriculture-related Internet service went online in February to make it easier for farmers and others interested in purchasing equipment through auctions to find what they're looking for.

"We're filling a void in the marketplace," said Farm Auction Guide.com President Dwayne Leslie. "There are over 700 farm auction websites in North America, but none allow for 'one search shopping' where a consumer is able to easily connect to the product in which they are interested. It could take weeks for a farmer to search through all the individual auction listings for a particular piece of equipment."

Farm Auction Guide.com is a searchable website where auctioneers list their sale bills. Consumers are able to go to the site, enter their product and find out if it's coming up for auction anywhere soon. The site also features a list of auctions in a particular area and their sale bills so consumers can discover what may be for sale close to home. Site visitors can find auctions by date and locate online auctions as well.

"Auctions are a way of life for people in the agriculture industry. For some, it's a way of obtaining equipment in a cost effective manner. For others, it's almost a pastime and a form of entertainment.

Break out of the ordinary

These skid steers are designed to outperform, and outlast, competitors. All are next-generation vertical-lift models with true

360-degree visibility, excellent breakout force, and compatibility with a wide variety of John Deere Worksite Pro™ attachments.

The only thing ordinary about them might be the price. Interested? Stop by today.

ROTO-MIX

"I purchased the Roto-Mix mixer because I wanted to be able to feed long hay as part of my TMR mix"
- Roy Brubaker, Hershey, PA

The Brubakers feed on average 500 lbs. of baled Timothy hay per feeding and they do like the way the Roto-Mix handles it. Since the Brubakers purchased their Roto-Mix mixer a little over a year ago, three of their neighbors have also bought Roto-Mix mixers from Lapps:

- Roy Brubaker and his family are milking 220 Holsteins.
- Herd average 24,000 lbs.
- Two feeding groups, 2 times per day feeding, 2 times per day milking.
- Bought a RotoMix 414 mixer from Lapps to replace a Rissler trailer mixer.

Waterbeds for Cows

ALANTA

Here's what some of our customers say about the Waterbeds:

David Butler, Fleetwood, PA

"We are very pleased with the decision to go with the waterbeds. First calf heifers have adapted exceptionally well and are often lying down within two hours of being put in the stall."

Ichus Farm, Little, PA

"I'm pleased with how the waterbeds retain their comfort over time."

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product. Comfortable, safe and hygienic, it clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

The ALANTA Waterbed is made of high-quality foam with a water-filled compartment in between. It's comfortable and a 10-year warranty.

Comfortable and safe. The waterbed molds itself to the cow's body, providing a soft, cushioned surface. It's perfect for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

SAFETY. The waterbed is made of high-quality foam with a water-filled compartment in between. It's comfortable and a 10-year warranty.

HOW BIG A COOLER DO I REALLY NEED?

Depends on a lot of things. But one thing's certain. Mueller makes the milk cooler that's right for your operation. And it's built to last. So it'll have high resale value the day you need a bigger cooler. For help deciding how big a milk cooler you need, contact your local Mueller dealer.

Soft Bed System Greatest Comfort in Freestalls

(10 yr. Warranty on Top Cover)

In the Soft Bed System, Kralburg matting in rolls forms the top layer which is combined with a Norbco specials foam underlay. The foam underlay is sealed at the edges with insulating strips to prevent dirt from penetrating the foam.

BEEF TIPS

Predictability is the goal of breeders

The goal of purebred cattle breeders is to be able to predict the outcome of the breeding of certain bulls with certain females. Simmental breeders report data gathered on every calf born and registered. This data increases the accuracy of predictions for the calves that will be born in the future. Simmental breeders often know within an accuracy range of over 90% what to expect for EC (Calving ease), BW (birth weight), WW (weaning weight), YW (yearling weight), MCE (the calving ease of the heifers produced), MM (the amount of maternal milk the mother produces) and MWW (maternal weaning weight). Carcass data numbers are also included.

EASTERN LAMB & PIG POWER SALE

SATURDAY, APRIL 14, 1:00PM at PINE HAVEN FARMS, Newville, PA

- Time and again this sale has produced champions from Pennsylvania to Georgia to Texas
- GaG Club Lambs topped off another great year with Reserve Grand Champion Lamb at the 2001 Pennsylvania State Farm Show (2nd year in a row) This year's lamb was sired by BROADWAY, who was also the sire of Achor's 2000 Ohio State Fair Open Show Grand Champ

• GaG Club Lambs along with guest consignor, BRUCE ACHOR, will be offering approximately 50+ outstanding club lambs

PINE HAVEN FARMS will be offering approximately 25-30 Belted, Blue Butt, Hamp, and York club pigs for you to select your next champion. The majority of this years pigs are sired by a littermate to Holloway's Wild West! as well as several top A1 Boars. These pigs will be ready for July through September shows

If your goal is to win in the showing, you can't afford to miss this sale.

MECHANICALLY DRIED ALFALFA HAY CUBES

We grow our own alfalfa under irrigation in the fertile soil of Maryland's Eastern Shore, where it's harvested almost immediately after cutting. While nutrient levels are still high and the leaves are still supple and green. The crop is then dried mechanically, and cubed. Delivered to Lancaster & Chester Counties for $130.00 Ton

ALL NATURAL-HARDWOOD MULCH

We offer a premium quality, all-natural, hardwood mulch perfect for landscaping and home gardening applications. We never use demolition material, ground pallets or chemicals—so our customers can rest assured that there are no contaminants in our product that could harm plants or flowers. Our mulch is double ground and screened and naturally composted to produce a very rich dark color and fine consistency. Large quantities available for pick-up or delivery.

WHOLESALE & RETAILERS WELCOME

We are only 30 minutes from Harrisburg and are conveniently located off of major highway. Mulch is the perfect product for truckers needing a backhaul from this direction - call for our extended hours and product samples and pricing info.

The Professionals In Farm Real Estate Service

New John Deere 7 Series Round Balers

Now, you can significantly improve the quality of your hay with the new 7 Series Balers from John Deere. Eight new models make solid bales from 32 to 72 inches in diameter. New MegaWide™ pickup sweeps in the heaviest windrow, while famous John Deere Diamond-Tread belts pack tight, dense bales. Plus, new CoverEdge™ net-wrap gives your hay the ultimate in nutritional value and storage protection.

Unlike conventional monofilament net-wrap which leaves four to five inches on each side unprotected, CoverEdge net-wrap extends over the sidewall to hold hay from edge-to-edge. It allows air to circulate inside the bale, yet effectively repels rain and moisture, keeping your hay more palatable, and more nutritious.

Don't compromise the feed value of your hay with an ordinary baler. Stop by and ask your John Deere dealer about the new 7 Series Balers and exclusive CoverEdge net wrap today!
